DE VALERA BEATEN FOR RE-ELECTION; DAIL ADJOURNS

Resigned President of Irish Republic Defeated by 58-60—Nomination of Griffith Ruled Out.

BRITISH PREPARE TO HAND OVER CONTROL

Measures for Transfer of Rule to New Irish Free State Follow Saturday's Ratification.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Jan. 9.—The Dail Eireann, after receiving the formal resignation of Eamonn de Valera as president of the Irish republic and refusing by a narrow margin to re-elect him to that office, adjourned at 6:40 p. m. until 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The adjournment came after Speaker MacNeill had ruled that a motion made by Michael Collins nominating Arthur Griffith as chief executive to form a provisional government was out of order. Collins himself moved the adjournment, speaking of the tactics of the opposition as "obstructionist."

The motion to re-elect De Valera was beaten by a vote of 58 to 60.

De Valera did not vote on the re-election motion. Robert C. Barton, who had voted for the treaty, voted for De Valera. Liam Roisite refused to vote, saying: "I refuse to plunge my country into fratricidal strife." Applause greeted the announcement of the vote, but Michael Collins was quick to say that the vote was not directed against De Valera personally. He hoped De Valera and his followers would co-operate with the winning side.

De Valera was cheered as he rose. "We will be with you any time any outside enemy appears," he cried loudly.

This produced a prolonged ovation.

De Valera Formally Resigns.

As soon as the Dail Eireann was convened this morning De Valera arose and placed his resignation as President of the Irish republic formally before the House.

Mrs. Thomas J. Clarke moved the re-election of De Valera as President of the republic. Liam Mellowes seconded the motion.

Michael Collins, one of the leaders in support of the Irish treaty, which was ratified Saturday over De Valera's opposition, said that no one in the Dail wished to be put in the position of opposing President de Valera.

He pointed out that the Dail was now faced with the problem of taking over the Government from the British, and he suggested formation of a committee, whose members would be chosen from both sides of the controversy, to keep the peace. "Work and not talk was now required," he said.

Arthur Griffith, speaking after Collins had concluded, said the question of the treaty had been constitutionally settled and that there was nothing to prevent its terms being carried out.

Collins States Position.

After the renomination of De Valera for the presidency, Michael Collins, addressing the Dail, said he would not object to the re-election of President de Valera, but that, if De Valera was re-elected, the people would turn out the Dail and the Dail would be the laughing stock of the world.

Miss Mary MacSwiney said: "We must carry on the republican Government until it is disestablished by the Irish people." She opposed the joint committee proposed by Michael Collins.

George Gavan Duffy demanded that De Valera tell the Dail what his policy would be.

De Valera replied that the republic must continue until the people by an election disestablished it. He was quite ready during the interval, he said, to help maintain the independence of Ireland.

He said that, until the treaty was put into legislative form and worked out, the people would not understand what it meant. He called the treaty "only a vague promise."

Challenge to Election.

The Dail must continue, he declared, until the people could decide between the treaty and the Irish republic. He challenged the supporters of the treaty to an election after the treaty was put into operation.

J. P. Hogan said the people had a right to decide immediately and he asked for a speedy election.

William Sears contended that the

GEORGE HARVEY INJURED IN CANNES AUTO ACCIDENT

Ambassador Strikes Heavily on His Back When Thrown From Car on the Breaking of an Axle.

By the Associated Press.

CANNES, Jan. 9.—George Harvey, American Ambassador to Great Britain, narrowly escaped death here today in an automobile accident. Accompanied by Richard Crane, former American Minister to Czecho-Slovakia, in whose car he was riding, and Wickham Steed, editor of the London Times, Ambassador Harvey was on his way for a round of golf.

The axle of the machine broke and Harvey was thrown out, landing heavily on the road. He was able to arise, but was rushed back to his hotel in a dazed condition.

Physicians found him suffering from shock and from severe bruises on his back, where he struck the road. His dazed condition after the accident lasted more than an hour.

The physicians of both Premier Lloyd George and Premier Briand, who attended Col. Harvey, said shortly before noon that the Ambassador's injuries were confined to severe shock and bruises. The physicians issued the following bulletin on Harvey's condition at noon:

"There was a contusion of the dorsolumbar region. The patient must remain in bed several days. No serious complications are anticipated."

The physicians expressed the opinion that he would be confined to his bed for several days, and said he should not attempt to attend any official duties.

Crane was uninjured, but Steed suffered from bruises and shock. Delegates to the Allied Supreme Council sent expressions of sympathy to Harvey and congratulations on his escape. Premier Lloyd George visited the hotel in person to make inquiries.

J. W. EGAN SON OF W. T. EGAN, PROBATE JUDGE DECIDES

Ruling Says Boy Was Offspring of Slain Politician and Nonie Bruen, Now Mrs. Nonie Stewart.

CLAIM OF SISTER OF SLAIN MAN DENIED

Estate of Approximately $100,000 to Remain in Control of the Public Administrator.

Judge Holtcamp in the Probate Court today decided that James W. Egan, 16 years old, is the legitimate son of the late William T. Egan, Constable and Democratic City Committeeman, who was shot and killed by gangsters in front of his saloon, 1400 Franklin avenue, Oct. 31, and whose estate is estimated at about $100,000.

In his decision he said the boy was the offspring of a common-law marriage between William T. Egan and Nonie Bruen, now Mrs. Nonie Stewart of 3605 Page boulevard, who admitted the maternity and was appointed curatrix for the boy Nov. 26 last.

Sister's Claim Denied.

The court denied the right of Mrs. Mamie Woelfel, sister of William T. Egan, to administer the estate and ordered that it be left in the hands of the public administrator.

In announcing his finding Judge Holtcamp said the testimony presented by Mrs. Woelfel to disprove the parentage of the boy was all negative, while the testimony presented on behalf of the Public Administrator was positive. The evidence, he said, showed that James W. Egan was born in the home of Mrs. Woelfel, that he was christened James W. Egan in William T. Egan's parish church and that Thomas Kane and Nellie Noble, friends of Egan and Nonie Bruen, sponsored the child.

The Court also pointed out that Mrs. Woelfel inserted the published death notices which asserted that William T. Egan was the father of James W. Egan.

Testimony Is Reviewed.

The testimony, he said, showed that William T. Egan and Nellie Bruen met about 1904 and thereafter lived together, and both before and after the birth of the boy held themselves out as man and wife.

In declaring James W. Egan to be a legitimate son the court said: "It is the spirit of the law to recognize the issue of a man and woman living together as legitimate if the facts at all seem to warrant that conclusion."

SENATOR SPENCER SWINDLED BY MAN POSING AS BANKER'S SON

Insisted That Youth Who "Had Been Robbed on Train" Take $65, Instead of $50.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Senator Spencer of Missouri learned something new about swindling Saturday at a cost of $65. He received a long distance telephone message ostensibly from Frank O. Watts, president of the First National Bank of St. Louis, stating that his son, Lawson M. Watts, had been robbed on a train bound for Washington and asking the Senator to supply him with funds.

The Senator went to the railway station and caused a notice to be displayed on the train bulletin board instructing Lawson M. Watts on arrival to come to the Senate Office Building. An hour later a young man appeared and introduced himself as Lawson M. Watts. The young man thought $50 would be sufficient as he was on his way home. Senator Spencer pressed an additional $15 upon him with success. After the young man had departed the Senator wired the bank.

"Must be some mistake," said Watts Sr. "I did not telephone you and my son is sitting by my side."

BANK SHORTAGE ATTRIBUTED PARTLY TO LIQUOR DEALS

"SINKING" OF CARGO LED TO KILLINGS

Egan Said to Have Doubted Story of Loss—$104,000 in Cash on Hand in Closed Institution.

Police investigation of the affairs of the closed Night and Day Bank, it was learned today from an authoritative source, is proceeding upon information which connects the defalcations of Arthur O. Meininger, fugitive cashier, with the operations of a "bootlegging" ring, and which has an indirect connection with two gang killings within the past year—the killing of John P. Sweeney, March 11 last, and the killing of Constable William T. Egan, Oct. 31.

According to information obtained by the police, Egan and two other men, one of whom had large financial dealings with the Night and Day Bank, were interested last spring in an enterprise for the transportation of whisky from Mexico to the United States.

Report That Cargo Was Sunk.

Such a cargo is said to have been started for the United States, and soon afterward a report was received here that the boat had been sunk. Egan, as one of the losers, is said to have been unwilling to believe the report of the sinking, and the incident started a feud between himself and his partners in the enterprise. Egan is said to have "gone gunning" for one of these men, and to have fired at him the shot which killed Sweeney, a lawyer, formerly connected with the Circuit Attorney's office, at Sixth and Chestnut streets.

The killing of Sweeney was a signal to the other side that it was unsafe to let Egan live, and he was accordingly killed, the police believe, by paid gunmen.

The police have previously received information that the three gunmen who killed Egan received $10,000, which they divided equally.

The present investigation is designed to show whether any of those connected with bootlegging operations were criminally implicated with Meininger in the looting of the Night and Day Bank. The investigation may also lead to arrests in the Egan murder case. The police theory is that Meininger is not the only culpable person in the bank case.

Grand Jury to Take Up Case.

The grand jury will begin its investigation of the Night and Day Bank's affairs at 2 p. m. tomorrow. The official stenographer of the Circuit Attorney's office was at the bank today taking statements of employes, under the direction of Circuit Attorney Sidener, for the grand jury's use. Sidener said he expected one indictment, and possibly more than one, to result from the evidence now at hand. The first indictment, it is assumed, will be that of Meininger, but Sidener has said that Meininger's flight does not prove that he was the only person guiltily involved, and that evidence against others will be sought.

J. G. Hughes, State Commissioner of Finance, who is in charge of the bank, said at Jefferson City today that the value of the warehouse certificates for 700 barrels of whisky, found Saturday in the bank's vaults, would be greatly increased if the United States Supreme Court should decide, in a case now pending, that permission can be granted for removal of the whisky from bonded warehouses. Former Gov. E. W. Major, counsel and one of the directors of the bank, is counsel for the plaintiffs in such a case, in which a decision is expected within a few weeks.

Many Telegrams Sent Out.

Telegrams have been sent by the police to several places in Mexico, as well as to the principal cities of the United States, giving a description of Meininger, and asking for his apprehension. About 260 of these messages have been sent.

Circuit Attorney Sidener today authorized Chief of Detectives Hoagland to offer a reward of $100 for the apprehension of Meininger, or for information which will lead to such apprehension. No condition is attached as to Meininger's conviction. "We will attend to the conviction, if we get him," Sidener said.

NEWBERRY DEFENDS SELF IN SPEECH AND ANSWERS QUESTIONS IN THE SENATE

"I Was Filled With Astonishment and Regret" —Senator Newberry.

"The cost of the campaign was about $195,000, according to the report, and when I learned of this amount, I was filled with astonishment and regret. * * *

"I shall not dwell upon the reasons which the committee thought imperatively demanded a campaign of newspaper publicity involving this expenditure of money. * * *

"I regret exceedingly that so large an amount of money was necessarily expended.

"In the acquisition of the money, in the solicitation of that money, in the collection of that money, in the use of that money, I had nothing whatever to do. I know nothing whatever about it, not even the amount of it.

"I did not know what amounts were given to the campaign. I did not know by whom these amounts were given to the campaign. I did not know either their source, their amount or their use. I have never agreed, either directly or indirectly, to repay or in any way to reimburse such contributions, nor have I, directly or indirectly, repaid or reimbursed such contributions."

TRUMAN H. NEWBERRY.

Text of Senator Newberry's Address in Senate Denying Wrongdoing in Campaign

Michigan Member Declares He Did Not Solicit or Spend One Dollar to Win Election.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—On taking the floor today Senator Newberry, speaking in his own defense in his case, said:

"As God is my witness, I am not to this day and hour conscious of having done anything in connection with either the primary campaign or the general election of 1918, in the State of Michigan, a single act that was, or is, in any way unlawful, dishonorable or corrupt, and this I say to the Senate of the United States without reservation or qualification."

"Upon these facts, as I then believed them to be, and as I now believe them to be, I shall abide the result with a clear conscience."

In his prepared address he said:

Why He Was Silent.

"I cannot remain silent any longer during the consideration of my right to represent the State of Michigan as one of its Senators. I did not volunteer to appear before the committee of the Senate which took testimony in this matter, because I really had no information that would assist in the investigation of the charges filed by my opponent. It seems to me that the time has come to speak. Because my silence might be misunderstood by my friends.

"As my colleagues in this body know, and as is also well known by my associates and constituents in the State of Michigan, I am not accustomed to public speech, and whatever service I have been able to render to my country or to others has been entirely along lines remote from oral debate. Therefore, I earnestly request my associates in the Senate to permit me to proceed with my statement without interruption.

"Fully, Frankly, Honestly."

"I shall take the whole case as I know it, fully, frankly and honestly, as in the presence of God and before my fellow Senators in this great tribunal; and I shall do this just as completely as I am able to do it. I can add absolutely nothing to what I am about now to state to the Senate. I must abide by whatever effect it may have upon the conscience and the judgment of the members of this body.

"It is perhaps unnecessary for me to say that I shall confine myself strictly and entirely to the facts as I know them to be, and shall not attempt in any sense, either by argument or appeal, to affect in the slightest degree the judgment of this body. So far as I am concerned I desire that the facts as they are shall determine this matter.

"On June 6, 1917, I was commissioned a Lieutenant-Commander in the United States Navy, and on July 23, 1917, I was assigned to the Third Naval District, with headquarters in the Brooklyn Navy Yard. I immediately took up my navy duties there, and from that day, July 23, 1917, until after the signing of the armistice, Nov. 11, 1918, I was never in Michigan a single hour. The primary election and the general election of 1918 occurred during my absence from the State of Michigan.

"In the early fall of 1917 I began to receive visits and letters from men active in public and political affairs in Michigan, urging me to become a candidate on the Republican ticket for United States Senator. I was not unmindful of the suggested honor and yet I fully realize that I certainly could not resign my commission in the navy to become a candidate for any political office, and that I could not take any personal active interest in a campaign while I continued to be an officer on duty in the United States Navy.

Wanted Business Management.

"While I was considering whether or not it was my duty to become a candidate for the United States Senate at the November election of 1918, I said to Mr. Allen Templeton, a citizen of Detroit, who was actively engaged in a large industry in which I was a stockholder, and who was also president of the Detroit Board of Commerce, that, if I should decide to become a candidate, I hoped it would meet with the approval of my Detroit business friends and associates, and that I trusted the campaign might be looked after by business men of that description. This is as far as I had any direct connection with the selection of the committee of business men whose management of the campaign in my behalf I shall remember with gratitude as long as I shall live.

"Mr. Paul H. King was induced to accept the active management of the campaign. The selection of Mr. King did not originate with me. It was not in any way arranged by me. I knew Mr. King but slightly. My last contact with him had been in 1912, when we were political opponents. * * *

"In my judgment Paul King is a man of the highest character and sterling integrity, and when he had been selected as manager of the senatorial campaign in Michigan, which was done without the slightest knowledge on my part, he insisted that before he would even accept, much less undertake to enter upon the work of the campaign, he should, and must, learn for himself, because of our differences in 1912, whether or not his management of the senatorial campaign would be entirely acceptable to me.

Cost of Campaign.

"He came to New York and we had a brief interview there. We did not

ASSERTS INNOCENCE IN SESSION MARKED BY DRAMATIC TENSITY

Speech Follows Attack on Him by Trammel—Only a Few Handclaps Greet Newberry's Effort, but Senators Congratulate Him.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—In a 30-minute prepared speech read to the Senate this afternoon, Senator Truman H. Newberry of Michigan denied he had used corrupt methods in procuring his seat in the Senate.

Newberry declared that he did not spend a dollar directly or indirectly on his campaign, that the sworn statements he made to the Secretary of the Senate disclaiming knowledge of any expenditures in his behalf were "absolutely true," and that the report of his Campaign Committee showing an expenditure of $195,000 caused him "amazement and regret."

"As God is my witness," he concluded, "I am not conscious of having done in the primary or election a single act that was or is in any way unlawful, dishonorable or corrupt. This I say without reservation or qualification."

At the conclusion of his speech Newberry was questioned by Senator Walsh of Montana, who brought out the fact that he had not testified either at his trial in Grand Rapids, where he was convicted, or before the Senate committee which inquired into the Ford-Newberry contest. (The Supreme Court set aside the Grand Rapids conviction on the ground that the act under which he was convicted was unconstitutional.)

Newberry said he did not appear as a witness at the trial because he was a "good client" and took the advice of his lawyers. He said he had not subsequently spoken, because he could add nothing to the known facts of the case.

Questioned by Walsh.

Walsh recalled to him the testimony of Fred P. Smith, confidential financial agent of the Newberry family, to the effect that in a telephone conversation with him (Smith) Newberry "kicked about the balances."

Newberry replied that his recollection differed from Smith's. He said that inquiry to Smith, asking when campaign expenses were going to end, was prompted by the newspaper criticisms that had been made about the expenses.

"I hated this harping on expenditures," said Newberry. "I hated it then and I hate it worse now."

Walsh continued to ply him with questions in an effort to show that Newberry was fully cognizant of the methods used by his managers. Newberry was unshaken in his general denial of knowledge.

Appreciative laughter broke out on the Republican side at some of Newberry's replies to Walsh.

Senator Watson of Indiana encouraged him once with "bully." Newberry stood during the first part of the examination, but when he saw it was going to be "quite a party," as he said, he asked permission to sit down. This was granted by Walsh.

"Go ahead and shoot," said Newberry at one point, "I'll do the best I can to answer."

Scattering Handclaps.

Scattering handclaps were heard in the galleries as Walsh, after his series of questions, said, "That's all," and Newberry turned to leave the chamber. Newberry was surrounded by a group of his supporters who congratulated him on the showing he had made. Spencer was smiling broadly.

Walsh was the only one to question Newberry. Immediately after the examination Senator Edge, Republican, of New Jersey, rose and began a defense of him.

It was Newberry's manner rather than what he said that encouraged his supporters to believe he had turned the tide in his favor.

In answering Walsh, he spoke with apparent frankness but his replies for the most part boiled down to a simple denial of knowledge of the matter brought to his attention.

Galleries Fill Early.

The public galleries filled early and many seeking admission were turned away. A few minutes before the session opened a doorkeeper went from gallery to gallery warning the audience that any applause or demonstration would result in a clearing of the seats. The small gallery set apart for the diplomatic corps was conspicuous by its complete emptiness when the session began at 12 o'clock.

Senator Newberry entered the chamber five minutes before noon, deposited some papers in his desk and went immediately to the Republican cloak room, stopping on the way to shake hands with two or three of his supporters on the Republican side.

Just as the chaplain was beginning his prayer, Newberry looked in at the cloak room door, but quickly withdrew.

A keen observer of the proceedings was Alfred Lucking, chief of Henry Ford's counsel, who occupied a seat in one of the public galleries.

Senator Spencer, the principal Newberry manager, brought with him to the floor a large stack of books and papers.

The Senate proceeded to the consideration of routine business, Spencer meantime walking about on the Republican side and conversing with Senators in their seats.

The Senator's reserve seats in the gallery in which Newberry's two sons were expected to take the seats they have occupied during the sessions of the last few days filled up early with members of Senators' families and others. Women were in the majority. In the first row was Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, who seldom misses an important or dramatic session of the Senate. Senate attaches and members of the House filled much of the space in the rear of the Senate chamber.

Trammell Attacks Newberry.

Senator Trammell, Democrat, of Florida, at 12:20 began an attack on Newberry and the report by Spencer recommending that he be exonerated. King of Utah interrupted to ask for order, saying that "private caucuses" on the floor were preventing the speaker from being heard.

Trammell characterized as "bold and daring" the assertion of the Spencer report that Newberry was not aware of the great expenditures in his behalf. Trammell said it had been proved that Newberry knew all about his campaign.

Spencer and Senator Curtis of Kansas, the Republican whip, had their heads together in whispered conference on the floor during a part of Trammell's attack.

As proving that Newberry was fully in touch with the campaign, even before it started, Trammell pointed out that Newberry had sent a personal representative to Washington to try to get Jay G. Hayden, correspondent of the Detroit News, to act as the Newberry campaign manager. Hayden later, upon urgent

AGREEMENT NOT TO LIMIT AIRCRAFT AT CONFERENCE

Five Powers Adopt Subcommittee's Recommendations, but Decide on International Commission to Study Problem for Possible Future Restriction.

NAVAL TREATY NEAR FINAL FORM

Merchant Ships of More Than 10,000 Tons Could Not Be Converted Into War Craft Under Terms Agreed Upon.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Limitation of development or use of aircraft is impossible at this time, the five Powers Armament Committee of the Washington conference decided today. It adopted a resolution, however, providing for an international commission to study the aircraft question with a view to future limitation.

The committee adopted substantially the report of its subcommittee, which found that to place a limit on aircraft in warfare would retard commercial development.

Other questions relating to armament went over until tomorrow.

Merchant ships of more than 10,000 tons displacement would not be available for conversion into auxiliary naval craft in time of war under provisions of the limitation treaty now practically completed by naval and legal experts of the arms conference.

Ships of 10,000 tons or less, when and if converted, would come within the rule which limits the armament of all naval craft except capital ships to guns of 8-inch caliber or less.

As the treaty nears the final stage the most debated questions appear to be whether an attempt should be made to lay down a specific definition of a merchant vessel as bearing on the relation of the arming of such craft to the proposed limitation of auxiliary naval craft to 10,000 tons and also the banning of submarines as commerce destroyers.

Merchant Ship Difficulty.

At the conclusion of a long session of the naval experts yesterday it was apparent they were having difficulty in reaching agreement on some of their technical definitions, and it was intimated that the question of defining a merchant ship within the meaning of the treaty has been or might be brought up again.

Although it was the original intention of the American delegation, at least, as indicated by Root in the full committee sessions, not to attempt to define a merchant ship beyond the definitions of international law, some of the delegates are known to be making a particular study of the question and to regard it as one that can be passed over.

The British delegates are said to be prepared to bring the question before the full commission if necessary and intend to argue that merchant ships may carry guns without becoming auxiliary war vessels and thus subject to attack without warning by submarines.

Shantung Deadlock Continues.

Although the Shantung controversy meantime remains in deadlock, there is evident in both the American and British groups today a belief that the mediation of Secretary Hughes and Arthur J. Balfour is almost certain to bring the Japanese and Chinese together again on this long-discussed issue. In American quarters hope was expressed for an agreement during the week.

CASHIER'S FAREWELL FOUND IN SAFE OPENED AFTER 48 HOURS

"I Am to Blame," Says Message Regarding $40,000 Shortage of Sterling (Ill.) Bank.

By the Associated Press.

STERLING, Ill., Jan. 9.—State Bank Examiners, checking the accounts of the First State Bank of Lyndon, whose cashier, Art Buzzell, disappeared Thursday night, today refused to discuss the bank's funds. They admitted a shortage exists. Persons in close touch with the bank's officers said the shortage urobably would amount to $40,000 or $50,000. The examiners still are at work.

The big safe in the bank which had withstood all previous efforts to open it has been opened. It was then learned that the time lock had been set for 48 hours when closed Thursday aftrnoon.

Inside the safe a note was found, addressed "to whom it may concern." This note as given out said: "I exonerate the president and directors of all blame. I alone am guilty of it all. I took the money and used it."

invitation, went to New York and conferred with Newberry, but declined to take the job.

Hayden, according to his testimony quoted by Trammell, was averse to quitting his newspaper work for a campaign job. He warned Newberry against conducting a "barrel" campaign in Michigan. Amid considerable confusion on the floor, Trammell continued to read from the record of the Newberry investigating committee in support of his thesis that Newberry swore falsely in his affidavit filed with the Secretary of the Senate, when he said that no money was expended in the campaign with his knowledge or consent.

The galleries remained packed but the attendance of Senators dwindled till there were only a few on each side. Newberry was still absent from the chamber.

Miss Alice Robertson of Oklahoma, the only woman of Congress, came in and took a seat on the Republican side waiting the end of Trammell's speech. Senators stirred about restlessly, gravitating between the floor and the cloakroom.

Spencer, in the course of his bustling about the chamber, put an arm affectionately around the shoulders of Senator France of Maryland, one of the doubtful Senators, and held him briefly in conversation.

Senator Underwood, the minority leader, one of the arms conference delegates, entered during the Trammell speech and conferred with members on the Democratic side.

At 1 o'clock the Senator from Florida was still speaking and Newberry had not yet come in from the cloak room.

When told by the Vice-President, presiding, that he had but a little time left under the rule limiting speeches to an hour, Trammell said that there were two propositions before the House and he had intended to speak continuously for two hours. He was overruled by the chair. Coolidge held a Senator could not speak more than an hour at a time. The two propositions were the resolution to vindicate Newberry and a substitute declaring his seat vacant.

Newberry Enters Senate.

A few minutes before Trammell was due to quit, Newberry came into the chamber and took his seat in the next to the rear row on the Republican side, well to the left of the rostrum. Senator Sterling of South Dakota stopped to shake hands with him.

Newberry, a solid, stocky figure, sat with impassive face, stroking his chin with his right hand and occasionally glancing about the chamber or upward at the galleries.

There was a great craning of necks among the spectators. As Trammell sat down, Newberry rose. Spencer immediately got to his feet and said that, if the Senator from Michigan would yield for a minute, he would like to suggest the absence of a quorum. This was done in order to bring absent Senators into the chamber. The clerk began calling the roll. At its conclusion the chamber was well filled on both sides.

Reads From Manuscript.

Just after Newberry rose to claim the floor, Senator Harrison of Mississippi asked that the Senate give its unanimous consent to his speaking longer than an hour if he so desired. Newberry thanked him, but said his remarks would not take an hour.

Newberry then began his set speech, reading from manuscript which lay on top of a pile of bound volumes of the Congressional Record on his desk. Newberry requested that he be allowed to proceed without interruption. Senator Pomerene of Ohio asked whether the Senator would yield for question at the end of his address.

Newberry replied that he expected to cover the whole case in his statement, but would yield at the end for any "reasonable" question.

"I am here as a Senator in my right," he said, "to give the facts and nothing more."

He would make his statement, he went on, "as in the presence of God."

A faint, quickly checked handclapping by one or two persons broke a tense stillness that followed this remark.

Williams Listens Closely.

Newberry spoke in a clear, steady voice, which, though not much above a conversational tone, could be clearly heard throughout the chamber. He was given the closest attention, practically every Senator turning in his seat so as to face the speaker.

Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, to hear the better, had moved over from the Democratic side and taken a position directly in front of Newberry.

When Newberry reached that portion of his speech in which he said that he heard with "amazement and regret" that his campaign had cost $195,000, Williams cupped a hand to an ear and said, "What's that?"

Senator Spencer, seated in the second seat to the left of Newberry, leaned over in Williams' direction and said loudly, "$195,000." Williams made a note of the sum.

Later in the day, Senator Williams addressed the Senate and declared by Newberry's statement that expenditures and contributions in his campaign were without his knowledge were as "false as hell."

Holding aloft Senator Newberry's original statement, Senator Williams asked: "Is there a man in the sound of my voice who believes it? It is a horrible thing to accuse a man of perjury."

Then turning to half the Senators in the chamber and asking each one if he believed it, without receiving so much as a nod, the Mississippi Senator banged his desk and shouted:

"You know it's as false as hell."

REQUISITION HONORED FOR RETURN OF PRISONER TO OHIO

Affidavits That John Britt, Wanted on Hold-up Charge, Was in St. Louis at Time, Overruled.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 9.—Gov. Hyde today honored a requisition from the Governor of Ohio for the return to that State of John Britt of St. Louis, charged with being a fugitive from justice in Ohio, where there is pending a charge that Britt was one of five men who in Cincinnati on Dec. 10, held up and robbed the messenger of the Hamilton County Bank of Cincinnati of $25,000 in securities and $1200 in cash.

Gov. Hyde previously had refused to honor a similar request with regard to Oliver Dougherty of St. Louis in connection with the same robbery. Dougherty maintained he was in jail at Clayton as a suspect at the time of the robbery, and Gov. Hyde took a certified copy of the jail record at Clayton as prima facie evidence that Dougherty could not have been in Cincinnati at the time of the robbery. Both Dougherty and Britt had been identified by the negro bank messenger, of the Cincinnati Bank. Britt today also presented evidence in the form of four affidavits to show that he was in St. Louis at the time of the holdup, but he was overruled by Joseph B. Painter, secretary to the Governor, who conducted the hearing.

"I'm going to honor this requisition and they can fight it out in the courts over the habeas corpus route if they desire," Painter said.

The Governor accepted Painter's recommendation.

MONOPOLIES IN SOUTH AMERICAN CABLES TO END

U. S. About to Make Agreement With Companies and Governments Which Will Bring Better, Cheaper Service.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1922.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The United States Government has succeeded in its first effort to abolish monopolies in cable communication throughout the world.

An agreement has virtually been reached with the Western Union Telegraph Co., the All-American Cable Co. and the Brazilian, Peruvian and Ecuadorean governments which will mean a revolutionary change in cable communication between North and South America, bringing with it unquestionably later on lower rates as well as improved service, and establishing ultimately freedom from cable monopolies in the Western Hemisphere.

Basis of Agreement.

The basis of the new agreement, which brings to an end the spectacular fight between the Washington Government and the Western Union over the landing of a cable in Miami, Fla., is this:

1. The All-American Cable Co. shall surrender the monopoly it enjoys to the landing of cables in Peru and Ecuador, while the Western Union, which is affiliated with the British-owned Western Telegraph Co., shall surrender its monopolies on the Brazilian coast and the eastern shores of South America, and thereafter neither company shall have monopolies on either coast.

2. The Western Union will be permitted to land its cable at Miami, Fla., connecting the Island of Barbados, where the Brazilian cable had reached, with the United States.

3. Settlement is conditioned upon consent of the Brazilian Government and the British company, the Western Telegraph Co., to the revocation of the original monopoly on the Brazilian coast.

Better Trade Facilities.

The willingness of the Western Union and the All-American companies to surrender their respective monopolistic privileges is an evidence of their far-sightedness, as well as their recognition of the fact that sooner or later, when the present monopolies did expire, this influence of the United States Government, whether the administration be Republican or Democratic, would be sufficient to prevent the renewal of such monopolies and that by an agreement at this time competitive conditions could be brought about which would enhance not only the revenue of the cable companies, but help to build communication and commerce between North and South America.

Trade in the Western Hemisphere has been hampered by poor communication, indeed before the All-American Co. came into the field, most of the cable traffic from the United States to South America was by way of Europe—necessitating delay on the one hand and creating a certain suspicion on the other that European business men were able to outbid Americans through prior knowledge of American offers. Those charges have been denied again and again, but it has been admitted that the opportunity for such tactics would be minimized if the United States had speedy communication with South America.

Fight in Previous Administration.

The fight for untrammeled communications in the Western Hemisphere began under the Wilson administration. Secretary Colby adopted practically the same policy as did Secretary Hughes—there was no politics in it, simply a deliberate effort on the part of the American Government to see to it that cable communication with the all-important continent to the south of us wasn't controlled by foreign-owned companies who might discriminate against the citizens of the United States.

President Harding, however, has the opportunity now to go even further and to use the example of what has been accomplished in the Western Hemisphere as a means of securing freedom from monopoly in other countries.

The Harding administration is saying nothing for the present about licenses to companies landing cables from European points, preferring to settle the South American situation first and offer an example of what can be done by abolishing cable monopolies.

But the fact is that the Kellogg bill, enacted recently into law, gives the Chief Executive powers which may revolutionize the whole question of cable communication if properly exercised. It will be recalled that the Wilson administration, feeling confident of the constitutional rights of the executive in refusing to grant permits to companies to land cables if the interests of the United States seemed adversely affected, found itself in the midst of litigation with the Western Union.

The Federal courts never did get a chance to decide whether the executive had the power to grant or revoke cable licenses, for in the middle of the controversy Congress acted and specifically vested in the chief executive all the discretionary power needed. It then became a matter for further negotiation between the State Department and the cable companies.

LAST OBSTACLE OUT OF WAY OF ARMY HOSPITAL

President Signs Order Transferring Jefferson Barracks Tract to Veterans' Bureau.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The last obstacle in the way of a new army hospital at Jefferson Barracks was brushed aside this morning when President Harding signed an executive order for transfer of the necessary land from the War Department to the Veterans' Bureau.

Representative Dyer made this announcement, following a call on President Harding. He directed the executive's attention to the order that was prepared and sent over by the War Department last week.

Dyer said that this clears the way for starting work. While officials in the supervising architect's office say they have not been formally notified of the intention to build at Jefferson Barracks, Dyer said he was informed that the Hospitalization Committee is ready to go ahead at once, following the favorable action of the President.

Accommodations are expected to be made for 200 beds at the hospital, which will be controlled by the Public Health Service. Assistant Secretary Clifford of the Treasury estimated that its cost would be approximately $1,000,000.

Man Found Dead From Gas.

The body of a man, later identified as that of F. D. Laventure, 46 years old, of 1917 Mallinckrodt street, was found at 10:30 o'clock this morning in a room at a rooming house at 924A North Nineteenth street. Gas was escaping from two jets. Herman Patterson, proprietor of the rooming house, told the police that Laventure had rented the room two weeks ago.

SENATOR NEWBERRY'S SPEECH IN DEFENSE OF HIS ELECTION

discuss even indirectly a single detail of the campaign. I recall that during the conversation had at the time Mr. King, in answer to a question as to how much it had cost the friends of Senator Townsend, whose campaign Mr. King had managed, said it had cost approximately $20,000, and added that in view of the situation then existing in Michigan he thought it would cost my friends approximately $50,000 to make a comprehensive and successful campaign. This is the only amount of money which, directly or indirectly, I ever heard mentional in connection with the senatorial campaign in Michigan until after the primary election and the report of the committee was filed.

"I did not solicit or expend, directly or indirectly, one single dollar in the campaign for Senator in Michigan in 1918, nor did I know of the contributions made until afterwards. The two statements which I made under oath to the Senate are absolutely and wholly true. The first is dated Aug. 14, 1918, and, omitting the printed form with which you are all familiar, and to which I sincerely subscribed, I wrote in my own hand, as follows:

"The campaign for my nomination for United States Senator has been voluntarily contributed by my friends in Michigan. I have taken no part in it whatever, and no contributions or expenditures have been made with my knowledge or consent.'

"The second, dated Aug. 28, 1918, with the same omissions, and in addition to the printed form to which I sincerely subscribed, I wrote with my own hand, as follows, under the head of 'Contributions'—'None with my knowledge and consent, and under the head of 'Disbursements'—'None with my knowledge and consent.' I have read a general public statement of Paul H. King concerning expenditures made by a voluntary committee of my friends, but these were made without my knowledge or consent.

"No Intention to Mislead."

"As every Senator knows, this form refers only to campaign contributions, disbursements and promises and to nothing else.

"I had not the slightest intention of misleading anyone in making this statement, nor do I believe any fair-minded man was in the least deceived thereby.

"The form of report furnished by the Senate under the act of Congress then supposed to be in force (but which has since been declared to be void) called for a full, correct and itemized statement, under oath, of all campaign contributions, names of contributors, all expenditures and the purposes for which expenditures were made.

"I had not the knowledge required to make such a verified report. Had my affidavit so stated this fact all criticism would have been avoided. I made the statement in the form it was made in, without consultation with anyone, and it was literally true. I had taken no active part in the campaign. I had not even been in Michigan. I had neither received nor expended any funds, and had no personal knowledge to enable me to make the report called for.

"In my statement filed with the Secretary of the State, I did call attention to the report of the Campaign Committee at Detroit, which report, as called for by the Michigan law, includes a full statement of receipts and disbursements.

Interviews With King.

"After one interview in New York, Mr. King went back to Michigan, and prosecuted a campaign, conducting it entirely in his own way. He managed a campaign of publicity and organization which was most effective, and for which I have frequently expressed to him the gratitude which I feel. Not more than half a dozen times did I see Mr. King throughout the campaign and each time it was in the city of New York. He kept me constantly informed as to the progress of the campaign, in which I was, of course, keenly interested.

"On one or two occasions, questions of policy were discussed between us and in each instance the judgment of Mr. King controlled.

"As I recollect the facts in one or two instances, his action was the exact opposite to that which I felt was the best thing to do. I do not mean to say that I did not know generally what was going on in Michigan. I had constant knowledge so far as information was concerned, regarding the progress of the campaign, but I had no direct participation in it.

"I knew, as a matter of fact, that a campaign of publicity was being extensively carried on, and I realized that such a campaign must necessarily cost a considerable sum of money; but I did not have the faintest idea as to the amount of money that actually was expended until after the report was made public. The cost of the campaign was about $195,000, according to the report, and when I learned of this amount, I was at once filled with astonishment and regret.

Amount Expended Large.

"The amount expended was large, more than I had any idea was being expended, and more than ought to be necessary to expend in any ordinary campaign. But this was not an ordinary campaign. I shall not dwell upon the reasons which the committee thought imperatively demanded a campaign of newspaper publicity involving this expenditure of money. I can only say that I regret exceedingly the fact that so large an amount of money was necessarily expended. I can further say that in the acquisition of the money, in the solicitation of that money, in the collection of that money, in the use of that money, I had nothing whatever to do. I knew nothing whatever about it, not even the amount of it.

"I make this statement, not to evade any responsibility, but in order that the actual facts in the matter, as I know them, may be presented to the Senate. How the money was spent in the State of Michigan, how the books of account were kept, who were engaged in this work, or what they did, I did not know, I do not know now, except from the accounts of the hearings which have been held and the report filed after the primary.

"It is and always has been my understanding that, in so far as the primary in Michigan is concerned, if the cost is not borne by the candidate himself, the committee in charge of the campaign may spend whatever amount it pleases for the 11 enumerated objects which are set forth at length in the Michigan primary law. Therefore I assumed from the start and I still believe that the law was carefully obeyed by this independent committee which had the campaign for my primary election in hand. * * *

"I made my statements under oath to the Senate, as provided by law, in the firm belief that they were full and fair statements of the absolute truth, and I so believe to this hour. I made them without consultation and without legal advice and with only the same facts before me, I would make exactly the same statements today that I made then.

Accusation and Expenditure.

"As to the campaign fund, the question of its acquisition or of its expenditure was never called to my attention by any one connected with me or the campaign committee, and when I stated that no money was spent with my knowledge or consent, I endeavored to convey the same impression which I now endeavor to make clear, namely, that as for myself, I was expending no money, and that I know nothing about the expenditures of money in the campaign. I want to make this point just as strong as I am able to do because it has been hinted that money which was contributed without my knowledge or consent, by relatives and friends of mine, was subsequently, in some way directly or indirectly, repaid by me, or was to be repaid by me. There is not even a shadow of truth or the slightest foundation for any such statement. I did not know what amounts were given to the campaign. I did not know by whom amounts were given. I did not know either their source, their amount or their use. I have never agreed, either directly or indirectly, to repay or in any way to reimburse such contributions. I have never made an agreement to do so nor have I any intention of so doing.

"So far as I am personally concerned, I did not spend in the primary campaign in Michigan a single dollar, directly or indirectly, and with the exception of a personal contribution of $1500 to the Republican State Central Committee, this is equally true of the general election. In spite of the fact that the whole people of my State were bombarded from every side by every means of publicity and appeal, with every detail of every charge made against me in connection with the primary, I was elected fairly and honorably a Senator from the State of Michigan.

"People Know the Story."

"The people of my State knew the whole story from beginning to end, and whatever action the Senate of the United States may take, I shall remember as long as I live the staunch loyalty of the people of Michigan, who, with complete and full knowledge of every allegation made against me, and of the charges that were made and placarded throughout the State in connection with the primary campaign, held me in such confidence and believed in me sufficiently to elect me one of their Senators from Michigan.

"I can add nothing to this statement to which the Senate with so much patience and courtesy has listened. It presents fully and frankly all the facts in the case as I know them to be."

THREE PREMIERS AND OTHER DIPLOMATS IN GOLF GAME AT CANNES

By the Associated Press.

CANNES, Jan. 9.

ONE of the most notable diplomatic golf contests in the history of the game was played on the Cannes Golf Club's links this afternoon. The players were Prime Minister Lloyd George of Great Britain, Premier Bonami of Italy and Lord Riddell on one side, and Premier Briand, Andrew Bonar Law and Sir Edward Grigg on the other.

The question of reparations, the economic situation and European affairs generally were discussed between holes. When the tenth hole had been reached, the golfers remembered they had called a Supreme Council meeting for 5 o'clock and had to abandon the game.

Honors were even when they quit.

ACTING ALTON POSTMASTER DIES OF APOPLEXY AT 69

Gilbert H. Lane, 69 years old, acting Postmaster at Alton, Ill., died this afternoon in his room at the Illini Hotel at Alton from apoplexy, with which he was stricken Saturday evening.

At the time he suffered the stroke employes of the postoffice and guests whom he had invited to a banquet he was giving, were assembled in the hotel dining room. He sent down word that he was ill and requested that the banquet be held without him, which was done. The seriousness of his illness was not made known then.

He took charge of the Alton Postoffice about three weeks ago after a bitter contest between the Senate and the House members of Congress from Illinois over his appointment. The House members, led by Congressman Rodenberg, favored his appointment and the two Senators opposed it. His appointment as Acting Postmaster finally was made after Postmaster Joseph K. Lambert was removed.

The date had been set for civil service examination to select a Postmaster. Lane would not have been able to take this examination because of his age.

His wife and members of the family were with him at his death.

SOVIET HEAD EXPLAINS LACK OF APPRECIATION

Discusses Relief Gifts, Blaming American "Aloofness" and Years of Trial.

By MICHAEL FARBMAN.
(Copyright by the Post-Dispatch, 1922.)

MOSCOW, Jan. 7.—"You certainly think us unappreciative, seeing how inadequate in form and amount is the gratitude of our people to the American Government for the generous gifts to our famine-stricken," said Maxim Litvinoff, chief of soviet legations, in an interview today.

"This is part of the tragedy that, after four years of destruction of Russian lives and treasure our people are unable to appreciate kindness. Our thankfulness to the American Government is impaired not only by the recollection of American participation in interventions, but also by the realization that American aloofness has inflicted on Russia losses in excess of American gifts.

"To give only one instance: American refusal to touch our gold, which does not prevent our gold from finding its way into the American Treasury, imposed upon us a loss of at least $30,000,000 to $40,000,000 with which we could have bought grain instead of relying on American gifts, or in addition to them. Our losses did not even benefit America; they went into the pockets of Swedish, French and other intermediaries.

"Don't Understand Aloofness."

"We do not understand the aloofness of the United States. We have been classified as pro-British, pro-German, even pro-French, but we are really pro-American. We believe America is the only country able to help Russia, not for sentimental reasons, but out of healthy self-interest."

To my remark that the past attitude of the United States is not surprising in view of the soviet's violation of property rights sacred to the American people, Litvinoff replied:

"As early as 1919 we unreservedly declared to the American envoy, William Bullitt, our readiness to recognize our debts, so that the American Government has less reason than any other to doubt the possibility of coming to an agreement with us."

Litvinoff denies negotiations are proceeding with the American Government or with any American group.

"We hear Germans, Swedes and others claiming to voice the sentiment of America," he said, "but so far we have not heard the voice of the American Government and, until we are officially invited to a conference with all the Powers or a single Power, we do not believe in approaching recognition. Since the revolution we have learned something, above all, patience. Now we can afford to wait; time is our most faithful ally."

Not Alone in His Faith.

Litvinoff is not alone in believing time is on the side of the soviets. I have heard this from scores of people here. It sounds incredible and, in view of the desperate economic position, the famine and epidemics, one is inclined to think time is anything but an ally. Yet it is a paradox of Bolsheviki rule that they see differently, interpret differently, and, on one point at least, they did not make any mistake—their estimation of the patience and tenacity of the Russian people in adversity.

The belief that recognition is approaching is fading, yet confidence in the soviet Government is unshaken. The people believe America only desired proof that the Bolshevik regime was representative of Russia. The Bolsheviki themselves are sure America soon will be satisfied the soviets have no rivals left and are the real, undisputed Government of Russia.

She died in an ambulance on the way to the city hospital without having talked further than to give her name. She had suffered fractures of her right leg and arm and of her skull.

The police noted pieces of broken headlight glass at the scene and have concluded that Mrs. Kunst was struck by an automobile, the driver of which did not stop. The glass indicated that the automobile was a Ford of late model.

The Vigilance Committee of the Safety Council today announced that it would pay $100 for disclosure of the identity of the driver of the car which struck Mrs. Kunst. The Coroner returned an open verdict.

Since Dec. 24, three women and two men, all of whom were past 50 years old, have been killed by automobiles, the drivers of which did not stop. Only one driver subsequently has been identified.

Levitt was taken to the city hospital but left there on Dec. 13. The Coroner will hold an inquest to determine the cause of death.

Ten Persons Injured in Auto Accidents Yesterday.

Mrs. Jennie M. Butler of 5534 Bartmer avenue reported to the police yesterday that it was her automobile driven by her negro chauffeur, Mose Lampkin of 2400 North Goode avenue, and occupied by her, that injured Fred Kump, 9 years old, of 4619 McPherson avenue, last Friday.

Mrs. Butler said in the excitement at the time of the accident she forgot to leave her name and address with the boy's family. Lampkin reported he was driving at a speed of 10 miles an hour when the Kamp boy darted into the street in front of 4519 Westminster place and ran into the fender and was knocked down. The father of the boy refused to prosecute.

William Meyers, 23, 3545 South Grand avenue, and Miss Marie Murphy, 26, of 4563 Wichita street, were cut and bruised when an automobile driven by Meyers collided with a concrete standard in front of 5600 Oakland avenue yesterday evening.

Four persons were cut and bruised at 3 p. m. yesterday when a hook and ladder truck of the fire department struck the automobile of Harry Cornell of 3913 Parnell street, in swerving to avoid a collision with the machine of Edmond Felger of 6527 Waterman avenue, at King's highway and Cabanne avenue. The injured were Cornell, Mrs. Emile Gibson, Emile Gibson and Dolores Gibson, who were in Cornell's machine. Felger, who is treasurer of the National Malleable Casting Co., was arrested, charged with careless driving and failure to stop at the approach of the fire apparatus. He said he did not hear the apparatus.

David Klearman, 21, 2914 Gamble street, was cut and bruised when thrown from his automobile in a collision with another machine driven by Joseph G. Williams, an attorney, of 1059 McCausland avenue, at Channing and Lawton avenues.

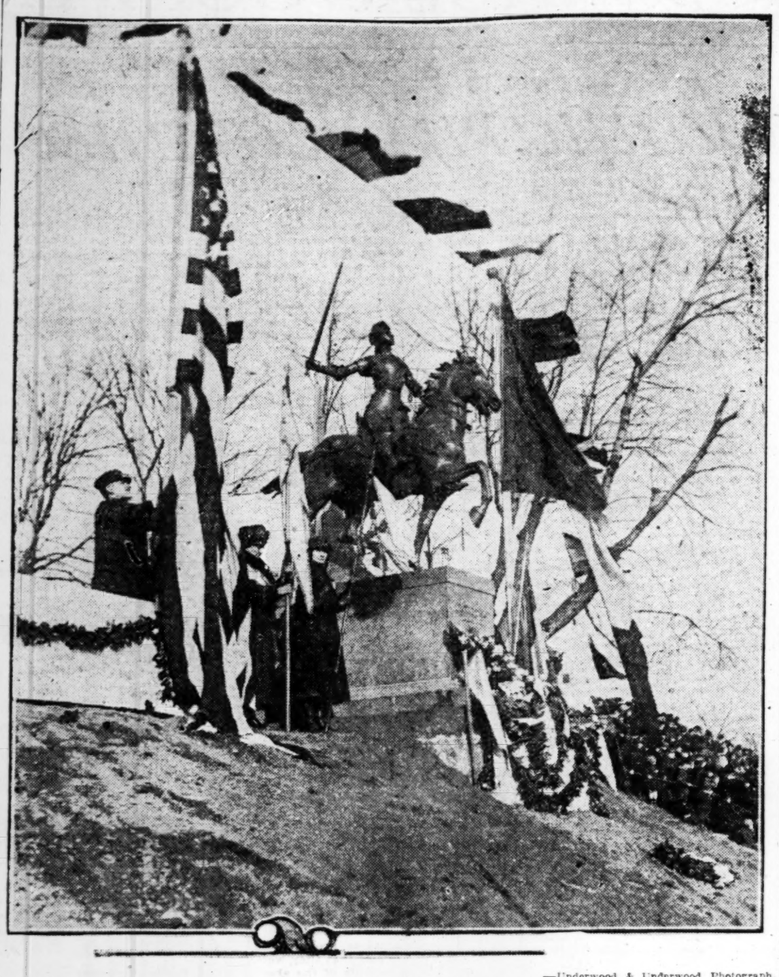

Harry Patterson, 36, 1935 Carr street; Mrs. Mable Patterson and Mrs. Bertha Douglas, of 3701 Cote Brilliante avenue, suffered scalp wounds and bruises when an automobile driven by Patterson collided with an automobile driven by Edward J. Cordes of 3730 Penrose street, at Florissant and Bremen avenues.

Only Two Roman Banks Under Moratorium.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Jan. 9.—It is semiofficially stated that the Roman courts have only granted the moratorium to the Banca Italiana di Sconto and the Societa Anonima Lloyd Mediterraneo and that all reports regarding a further extension of the moratorium are false. These two concerns, it was added, are the only ones which asked for the moratorium.

BANK SHORTAGE ATTRIBUTED PARTLY TO LIQUOR DEALS

Meininger's, was pulled out of the mud by Henry Richterkessing, a farmer, near St. Peter's, eight miles from St. Charles, last Wednesday afternoon. Meininger was later in St. Charles, where he abandoned his machine. He was supposed to have taken a Wabash train from St. Charles for Kansas City Thursday afternoon. It has been learned that a pasenger got on that train, without having bought a ticket at the station, and paid his fare to Kansas City.

$104,000 in Cash on Hand.

Cash on hand in the closed bank amounts to about $104,000, it was announced today by State bank examiners, who completed yesterday the checking of the cash on hand. The money has been deposited in the American Trust Co. to the account of Commissioner Hughes.

The cash found is somewhat more than the reserve legally required for a bank with the capital and deposits of the Night and Day Bank, as the legal requirement would be about $100,000.

Commissioner Hughes, in Jefferson City today, said he had no further information on the amount of the bank's loss, which he has estimated officially at $260,000 or more, and which some reports place between $500,000 and $700,000. He was also unable to say whether the deposits, amounting, on the face of the bank's showing, to about $2,820,000, would be impaired. He said Saturday night that if much "bad paper" should be discovered among the bank's assets, the deposits might suffer.

Hughes discussed three alternative courses by which he might undertake to straighten out the bank's affairs. He is empowered to liquidate the affairs of the bank, to provide for its absorption by another bank if one can be found which will make a satisfactory proposition, or to allow the Night and Day to reopen, if the management makes satisfactory guarantees that it is on a sound financial basis.

"We will proceed in such a manner," Hughes said, "as to keep the way open all the time to take advantage of whatever opportunity offers the best solution."

In adjusting the difficulties of the 32 banks and trust companies which suspended during 1921, Hughes at one time or another used all of these methods.

How Similar Case Was Handled.

In the case of the People's Bank of De Soto, which was closed after discovery that an officer, who had killed himself, was short a large sum, Hughes was instrumental through his examiners in obtaining the organization of a trust company, which, with the consent of the depositors, some 1800 in number, took over most of the People's Bank, giving to the depositors certificates for time deposits for the percentage of their money which the assets covered. In this way each of the depositors was able to get a portion of his money within a short time, with the assurance that the remainder was on deposit to his call at the expiration of graduated periods, a month or so apart.

Hughes said he could not now tell whether such a plan would be feasible in the Night and Day case, because he needs reports from his examiners, who will have to make an exhaustive investigation. It is possible that the entire four months allowed by statute for the filing of claims, may have to run before the approximate situation can be determined.

The consent of all the depositors will be necessary, as well as an order of the Circuit Court, before any transaction involving the transfer of deposits can be made.

A court order also would be required for the appointment of a special deputy director of finance to take charge of the operations, should Hughes decide to liquidate the bank's affairs.

Hughes, Circuit Attorney Sidener and former Gov. Major yesterday examined the contents of the valise taken Saturday from a room rented by Meininger at the American Hotel. They said that the examination gave no new information as to the manner in which the cashier obtained the bank's money. It has developed that a considerable part of the defalcation was through cashier's checks and drafts on New York.

No Clew on Liquor Certificates.

[illegible] how Meininger became possessed of the warehouse certificates for whisky, which have strengthened the belief that Meininger was interested in bootlegging operations. As has been told, the valise contained a number of papers relating to transactions in oil stocks. Meininger is said to have been a receptive customer for oil stock salesmen and saleswomen.

Because of an advertisement published by the law firm of Kimmel & Britt, offering to represent depositors of the Night and Day Bank, on a reasonable contingent fee basis, in collecting their money, those in charge of the bank's affairs today announced that depositors would not need the services of a lawyer, and could collect their full share of the bank's assets, after the latter had been determined, in a manner which will be announced as early as possible.

Several keys to safe deposit boxes, presumably in the vaults of the Night and Day Bank, were found among Meininger's effects. An inquiry will be made to determine whether any of these were duplicate keys of boxes held by customers. A report that Meininger had a master key, which would enable him to open any box, was declared to be without foundation, as a master key in a safe deposit system does not open any box without the individual key for that box.

No estimte has been reached of the total of the cash slips which, as told yesterday, were placed in the bank's cash to represent money withdrawn by Meininger.

G. W. PEPPER APPOINTED PENROSE'S SUCCESSOR

Philadelphia Lawyer Is Named by Governor to Fill Late Senator's Unexpired Term.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9.—George Wharton Pepper, a Philadelphia lawyer, was appointed United States Senator by Gov. Sproul today to succeed the late Boies Penrose.

Under the law the appointment stands until a successor is selected at the November election to fill the unexpired Penrose term ending in 1927.

Gov. Sproul in announcing the appointment said that in order that there might be a full understanding of the situation he desired to say that he expected Mr. Pepper to be a candidate to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Penrose.

George Wharton Pepper is not unknown to many members of the Senate. During the time the Versailles treaty was under consideration Pepper attracted wide attention by opposing the ratification of the League of Nations covenant in joint debate on the public platform with Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska in this city and with Senator Pomerene of Ohio in Indianapolis.

Like Boies Penrose, Pepper comes from an old Philadelphia family. He will be 55 years old on March 16. He was educated in private schools and was graduated in 1887 from the University of Pennsylvania, of which he is now a trustee, and from the law department two years later. He has had wide experience in the civil practice of law.

The new Senator is widely known in many activities, but up to this time has declined all offers of salaried public office. During the world war he was a member of the Council of National Defense and of the Pennsylvania Public Safety committee.

Pepper is a member of the Episcopal church and an expert on the canonical law of the denomination.

In his university days, Pepper was a hammer thrower on the Pennsylvania track team and played football. He defended organized baseball in the Federal League suits and had much to do with the drafting of the present national agreement of the American and National leagues.

FRED VAN BLARCOM SANE NOW, SEVERAL WITNESSES SAY

H. S. Priest, Dr. Theodore Romeiser, J. C. Moore and Charles Hertenstein Testify for Late Banker's Son.

PLAINTIFF ALSO ON STAND FOR SELF

He Tells of Working in Engine Room at Temperature of 130 When in Navy in Philippines.

A hearing to establish the mental condition of Frederick Van Blarcom, son of the late Jacob C. Van Blarcom, a former president of the National Bank of Commerce, was begun before a jury in the Probate Court today.

A jury in the same court declared Van Blarcom to be of unsound mind in April, 1920. Since then Van Blarcom has been an inmate of the City Sanitarium, but has been free to go where he pleased in the daytime. The present jury hearing was asked for by Van Blarcom after Judge Holtcamp refused to declare him sane last Tuesday.

Former Federal Judge Henry S. Priest was the first witness for Van Blarcom today. He testified that he believed Van Blarcom's sanity had been restored.

Priest told the Court he was for many years attorney for Van Blarcom's father. He said he examined Frenerick Van Blarcom about two weeks ago and gave him a mental test by questioning him closely as to his property, his boyhood and his associations. This conversation, he said, convinced him of Van Blarcom's sanity. He described Van Blarcom as being well informed on some subjects and not so well informed on others.

Cross-examined by George H. Williams, counsel for Van Blarcom's guardian, the St. Louis Union Trust Co., Priest said it was a fact that Van Blarcom had hallucinations in April, 1920, but apparently these have passed away. In testing Van Blarcom, he said, he did not attempt to test his memory of dates.

Details of Priest's Testimony.

Priest said that some of Van Blarcom's delusions were that medicine was being withheld from him, that his mother, now dead, was not properly handling his estate and that his mother was not receiving enough medical advice. Priest said that if Van Blarcom's estate should be turned over to him it would yield him about $1250 a month and that he believed Van Blarcom was of a provident nature and would handle the income wisely.

In their lats conversation, Priest said, Van Blarcom told him he could not eat at large downtown hotels, as they charged too much. Asked if he thought Van Blarcom's presentation of $250 worth of flowers to his physician was evidence of insanity, Priest said he thought it showed eccentricity but not necessarily insanity. As to Van Blarcom's alleged expenditure of $40 a month for candy, Priest said: "It is not extravagant for a man in his position. You or I might spend that much for cigars."

Dr. Theodore Romeiser, a specialist, testified that in his opinion Van Blarcom was eccentric and unusual, but not insane. He thought Van Blarcom was capable of handling his afairs. He said Van Blarcom from birth had shown peculiar individual characteristics and anomalies of disposition.

Recently, he said, he questioned Van Blarcom as to what he would do with a large sum of money and Van Blarcom replied he would invest it in Government bonds and live on the income.

Other Witnesses Heard.

John C. Moon, who purchased the Van Blarcom residence at 1 Westmoreland place, and Charles Hertenstein, chairman of the Efficiency Board, testified that recent conversations with Van Blarcom convinced them he was sane.

Van Blarcom took the stand. As at his first sanity hearing, he told incidents of his boyhood and recounted how he had several times escaped from sanitariums and hospitals, how he enlisted in the United States navy and deserted and later escaped from a naval hospital in Philadelphia, where he was under observation as to his mental condtiion.

He also told of having served in the British army in the World War. As though attempting to explain his former mental condition, he said that, while serving in the United States Navy in the Philippes, he worked in the engine room of a war vessel in a temperature of 130 degrees.

Van Blarcom, testifying concerning the financial arrangements under which he is now living, said that he gets $45 weekly, out of which he pays his medical and confectionery bills, and that the trustees of the estate pay $50 monthly for his room at the sanitarium.

Reference to his "confectionery" bills revealed the fact that he has a standing order for four pounds of candy to be delivered weekly to certain nurses at the sanitarium.

Questioned as to Flower Bill.

The question of a flower bill of $250 was introduced. Van Blarcom said that he had ordered flowers in honor of the birthday of Supt. Johns, but that he had not expected the bill to exceed $65, and that he was astounded when he saw the total sent in. On his protest, he said, the bill was reduced to $100.

In order to show that he possessed business acumen, Randolph Laughlin, one of Van Blarcom's lawyers, asked if he had taken any steps to keep himself from "being robbed by his own lawyers." Van Blarcom said that he had and asked for permission to produce a letter in which he had made an agreement with Laughlin and A. M. Frumberg. The Court decided the letter should not be shown, however.

Dr. David S. Booth, called as a witness on Van Blarcom's mental condition, gave a definition of insanity. He said that "when we can control our thoughts we are not insane, but that when our thoughts run away from us, it is different." He said he considered Van Blarcom had control of his mind.

Supervisor S. P. Fish of the city sanitarium said that he considered Van Blarcom in control of his mentality.

Lad Who Refused Million, Now a Father, Accepts It

Charles Garland, Secretly Married, Changes His Attitude Toward His Father's Fortune Without Comment.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—Charles Garland, who more than a year ago announced his refusal to accept a legacy of $1,000,000 willed to him by his father, the late James A. Garland of this city, has reconsidered his decision and will accept the money, according to the Boston Post. His brother, Hamilton, who likewise declined a legacy of equal proportions, has accepted his share of the family fortune, the Post declares. Garland, who lives with his mother and two brothers in a tumble-down farmhouse at North Carver, Mass., refused, the Post said, to discuss his reasons for reversing his decision.

Charles, in declining his inheritance last year, condemned a system which starved thousands while hundreds were stuffed. "It is such a system that offers me a million dollars," he then said.

"It is blind to the simplest truth, known to every child, the truth that the hungry should be fed and the naked clothed. I have had to choose between private property and the law which is written in every human heart. I choose the one which I believe to be true."

Hamilton withdrew from Harvard College last year in his sophomore year, giving as the reason that he was not getting enough out of college life. According to the Post, he was secretly married soon after, and he is now the father of a two-weeks-old child. Hamilton is 21 years of age, and his brother, Charles, who also is married and is the father of a one-year-old daughter, is 23.

A third brother, James A., accepted his share of the estate last year without comment.

By the Associated Press.

MIDDLEBORO, Mass., Jan. 9.—Charles Garland, today confirmed a report that he had had a change of mind, and that Hamilton Garland said he still thought the property system against which he revolted a year ago was wrong, but he had come to the conclusion that he ought not to allow the money to lie idle.

"I will not use it for furthering any socialistic idea or for the extension of my farm work," he said. "I will use it for my own special purposes, but I do not wish to say at present what those are."

MARQUIS OKUMA, TWICE REPORTED DEAD, STILL LIVES

Physician of Aged Japanese Statesman Mistook Coma for Death, Dispatches Say.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Jan. 9.—Marquis Okuma, the aged statesman, whose condition of coma led to reports of death, was still alive at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

A Tokio dispatch, by way of London, on Jan. 6, stated that Marquis Okuma had died that day. Honolulu dispatches from Tokio to the native press of Honolulu also gave the death of Marquis Okuma on that day. Honolulu dispatches of the 7th stated that the Marquis' physician at Tokio announced that the state of coma into which the Marquis had fallen had been mistaken for death and that he had regained consciousness. The death of the Marquis previously had been officially announced from Tokio and posthumous honors had been bestowed on him by the regent, Prince Hirohito, in the name of the Emperor.

DE VALERA FORMALLY RESIGNS; RE-ELECTION PROPOSED IN THE DAIL

Dail had ratified the treaty and that the world would so accept it.

John Macintee of Monogahan argued that England had not yet given Ireland the Constitution for the Free State and that until the terms of the treaty were carried out the republican Government must be continued.

Macintee urged keeping the resources of Ireland intact so that they could fight "if England lets us down."

John McKeeoan and Michael Collins both jumped up at this, shouting, "We will!"

De Valera said that, if he were re-elected, no effort of his would be made to obtain a joint Cabinet.

"Don't Want the Office."

"I don't want the office at all," he declared. Then, looking at Griffith and Collins, he added:

"You have a majority with your 64 votes. Elect your own president."

A spirited tilt followed between William Cosgrove, a strong advocate of the treaty, and De Valera.

John Milroy said that De Valera and his associates having been defeated, the only constitutional step to take was for the defeated party to surrender their authority to the majority side.

De Valera nodded his head and said "hear, hear," when Milroy quoted De Valera as having declared he would accept the vote on the treaty as defining the will of the Dail on the issue.

Every deputy who voted for the treaty, Milroy said, was absolutely obligated to help carry it out.

Countess Markiewicz declared it was shameful that President de Valera, in resigning, should be accused of political trickery.

Ordered Government Necessary.

Cosgrove, Minister of Local Government, said the essence of the position of the treaty's opponents was that they did not want to see the treaty carried out. He submitted that the suggestion for the reelection of the president was unconstitutional and the resolution calling for it out of order, the only motion that was in order being the Collins motion for a joint committee.

The government of the country, declared Cosgrove, must continue, and nothing should be done to upset the existing status of the Dail and thereby endanger the working out of the treaty. There could not be an ordered government, he asserted, if the government were given into the control of a minority.

Richard Mulcahy, chief of staff of the republican army, said the Dail had carried on at first without a president of the republic and if necessary could do so again. He opposed President de Valera's re-election.

CADDY RESCUED FROM BOTTOM OF ICY LAKE

L. E. Cornelius in Thrilling Struggle Saves Johnnie Foley From Normandy Pond.

When Johnnie Foley, 12 years old, of 6137 Ridge avenue, finished his afternoon's caddying for F. X. Walsh of 5128 Raymond avenue, on the Normandy Golf Club course, at 5 p. m. yesterday, he slipped away to the lake hazard at hole No. 8. During the play a ball bounded out on the thinly frozen surface of the lake, and Walsh had not permitted him to take the risk of going after it.

But Johnnie Foley had never lost a golf ball all the days of his caddying and he had a reputation to uphold. He was resolved to retrieve that ball.

Near the middle of the lake the ice broke under his weight and he went down. L. Howard Willett, 5696 Kingsbury place, and Clarence M. Tevis, 4946 Buckingham Court, the last men on the course, were playing up on the seventh tee when they heard the boy's call for help. They called to Dr. Amand Ravold, 70 Vandeventer place, and others, and ran to the lake.

The boy's hold on the edge of the ice relaxed as they approached and he sank. There were not enough men to form a chain. A rope was the only hope. Tevis ran to the house of a club employe and obtained a rope. Too exhausted to run back he tossed it to a boy, who ran with it to the lake.

L. E. Cornelius, 3936 Palm street, volunteered to try to save the boy. The rope was tied about him and he started. Ten feet from shore the ice broke under him. The remaining 30 feet he struggled through the water, breaking the ice with his fists, swimming or kept afloat by the buoyancy of the ice cakes, and on reaching the point where the boy had gone down in deep water, he dived and swam to the bottom, found him and brought him up and the two were dragged ashore with the rope.

The men say he had been under the water six to eight minutes, and respiration had ceased, but after Dr. Ravold had worked on him 10 to 15 minutes the boy breathed. Players, relaying as carriers, got him to the clubhouse as quickly as possible and the doctor and the players worked on him an hour and a half before he opened his eyes and feebly inquired: "Did I get the ball?"

He was reassurred on that point and his next anxiety was about the $1.25 which he had in his pocket. After that had been produced and added to by the players, he commented: "You can't kill the Irish," and obeyed the doctor's admonition to refrain from philosophizing until he was stronger.

Walsh telephoned home for an automobile and when Johnnie was able to be moved he was taken home. This morning he was little the worse for wear except that he had a rapid pulse and was bearing with fortitude the adulation of the seven other young Foleys.

SONGS OF GANZ HEARD AT SUNDAY CONCERT

Director's Ditties Enthusiastically Received by Capacity Audience—Many Turned Away.

The development of Rudolph Ganz as a writer of songs was illustrated at yesterday afternoon's Symphony Concert at the Odeon, when a group of four of his ditties was given by Mrs. Emma Patton Hoyt, soprano, of Chicago. The first of the list, "Pensee," is his latest song, and the fourth, "Love Shall Be," written when he was 16, was the earliest.

The whole gulf lies between them that separates the romantic and modern styles. The composer played the accompaniments, and the songs were enthusiastically received by an audience that taxed the capacity of the auditorium. As an encore, Mrs. Hoyt gave "The Angels Are Stooping," another Ganz lyric.

The soloist's first number was an aria from Massenet's "Manon," entitled "Je suis encore tout etourdee." It was followed by another aria, "O mio bobbino caro," from "Gianni Schicchi," one of Puccini's recent "trittico" of operas. Mrs. Hoyt revealed a well-trained voice, rather sweet, but thin and inclined to stray from the pitch. She wore the most charming costume ever seen at a "pop" concert.

The feature of the program was a "first time" suite, "Caucasienne," by Mikail Mikailovitch Ippolitoff-Ivanoff, a work in three movements of the most pungent and highly spiced instrumentation, of vigorous rhythm, and exotic melody. In the second movement were heard for the first time in this city the shrill throbbings of a pair of toy kettledrums, about six inches in diameter, which were tuned to the F-sharp and C-sharp above the E on the lowest line of the treble staff. The audience showed great delight in the work, and as an encore Boccherini's Minuet in A Major was daintily played.

Another number, "Tarantelle," an early work by Saint-Saens, served to display the utmost virtuosity of Messrs. Kilburz and Zottarelle, solo flute and clarinet of the orchestra. The latter part of the work was repeated.

Three other orchestral selections were of a caliber suitable for the Friday and Saturday concerts—the overture to Goldmark's "Sakuntala," the second movement from Saint-Saens' second symphony, in A minor, Op. 55, and Tschaikowsky's "Capriccio Italien," Op. 45. The word "popular" scarcely applies any more to these Sunday afternoon concerts; Director Ganz is raising their standard nearer and nearer that of the regular offerings; and the public likes the change so well that yesterday many were turned away from the door.

CYCLIST HAULING WHISKY HELD

Three Others Arrested and "Moonshine" Seized in Raid Upon House.

Lorenzo Maucini, 30 years old, of 1805 Cooper street, was arrested last night at Rosedale and Enright avenues, when policemen reported finding a five-gallon can of what they say is "moonshine" whisky in a side care attached to a motor cycle Maucini was riding. Policemen reported he offered them $40 to turn him free. They "accepted" the money and held it as evidence.

On Maucini's story as to where he had obtained the liquor the police raided a house at 6110 Enright avenue, arresting three men after finding seven bottles of supposed whisky in the house. The men denied knowing of the whisky.

A piece of petrified substance closely resembling the body of a man was found in the old coal mine on the Cleveland farm, three miles east of Blue Jacket, a few days ago.

5000 SEE ORCHID SHOW AT BOTANICAL GARDEN

Prof. Warburg of Berlin Pays Tribute to Arrangements of the Grounds.

The attendance at the orchid show at the Missouri Botanical Garden yesterday was larger than the attendance on any previous single day with the exception of certain days of the chrysanthemum show. Approximately 5000 persons, based on a turnstile count, passed through the floral display house which has been converted into semblance of a tropical forest for the showing of the orchids in their native habitat.

The fidelity of the reproduction was noted by Prof. Otto Warburg, professor of botany in the University of Berlin, who visited the garden in the morning. He is in St. Louis in the interest of the Jewish back-to-Palestine movement, of which he formerly was world head. Prof. Warburg said that he had searched for orchids in their native airs, the Himalayas, and that the reproduction of their manner of growing was as exact as artificial measures could accomplish.

Praise From Prof. Warburg.

Prof. Warburg also noted the range of the garden's trees and plants and the orderliness of their display. He has inspected the botanical gardens in each city of the United States which he has visited and said that none approached the Missouri garden. He remarked the height of the floral display house. "We have nothing like it in Berlin," he said. "When we get ready to build again, we must send our architect here."

One group of orchid plants has been placed near the entrance of the "forest" to get the attention of all visitors. They are the Abraham Lincoln slippers, remarkable in that they are one of the few American hybrid orchids. The crossing and growing of orchids—a five to seven year task to bring them to a bloom—is so tedious that few botanists in America have essayed it.

Coloring Is Variegated.

The Abraham Lincolns have a white, large sepal flushed with purple. The slipper is a purplish brown shading out to green. The petals are green mottled with brown. The center or heart of the orchid resembles in contour and coloring the American Beauty rose.

One of the "freaks" of the show is the butterfly orchid, so named because of its resemblance to a butterfly, though Prof. Warburg thought he saw, rather, the form of an Indian dancing girl.

The sepal of the flower is yellow at the center, but a mottled orange at its fringed outer rim. Two petals attenuated into resemblance of wings are a deeper shade, while three other petals extend out like the antennae of the butterfly. The flower is so shaped that the thorax and the head of a butterfly are quite easily noted.

The orchid show will continue through January and most of February.

GIRL LOSES DOG TRAINED TO HOP RUNNING BOARD OF AUTO

St. Charles Poodle, Accustomed to Taking Rides on Ford, Disappears on Buick.

The question in the South Fifth street neighborhood in St. Charles is whether Whitey, Edna Brockmann's poodle, couldn't tell the difference between a Buick and a Ford or whether he became dissatisfied with a Ford.

Whitey, in addition to being the light of Edna's young life, was the pet of the neighborhood, and when Fritz Hoelscher, one of the neighbors, trained him to jump on the running board of his Ford as he passed by, all the neighbors turned out to see the show. After that, Whitey watched for Hoelscher and his Ford and hopped the running board every time it came by, and received as his due the plaudits of the neighborhood.

Saturday evening Whitey was out watching for the Ford when a Buick came along. Whitey gave a little yap of recognition, or it may have been a bark of aspiration to something better in the automobile line, and went bounding to meet it and hopped up on the running board and was sitting proudly there the last that Oscar Heimbrock, a neighbor, saw of the dog and machine as they went west.

Edna is 12 and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Brockmann of 927 South Fifth street and she is disconsolate, and she asks anybody who sees a white poodle who waggles when you call him Whitey and is fond of showing how he can hop the running board, to let her know right away.

HILL'S C. B. Q. Tablets are best by test. Try this simple experiment:

1. Drop a C. B. Q. Tablet in a glass of clear water.
2. Instantly the tablet begins disintegrating or "breaking up."
3. In 10 seconds the medical properties are thoroughly mixed with water.

Thus, Hill's C. B. Q. Tablets act immediately, give relief without delay and begin checking Colds and La Grippe long before ordinary tablets, by actual test, are absorbed by the stomach juices. LUMBER VALUED AT $200,000 BURNED IN HUTTIG YARDS

General Alarm Turned In for Blaze Which Started at 2:15 A. M. Sunday on South Vandeventer Av.

FLAMES SPREAD TO LARGE SHED

Three Loaded Box Cars Were Destroyed and One Fireman Was Overcome by the Smoke.

Lumber valued by the company at approximately $200,000 was destroyed by fire yesterday morning at the plant of the Huttig Sash and Door Co., 1100 to 1300 South Vandeventer avenue. The loss was fully insured. The fire was discovered at 2:15 a. m. by John Hollowood, the plant watchman, in a pile of lumber in the center of the north yards, near a private switching track. A general alarm later was sounded.

Flames Spread to Shed.

After destroying the lumber pile, the flames spread to a shed, 100 feet wide and 120 feet long, filled with door and window sashes and sectional building framework, and then to a shed filled with assorted lumber. Although 15 streams of water were used to keep the fire from gaining further headway, three box cars filled with lumber were destroyed.

W. E. McManus, member of Engine Company 21, was overcome by smoke.

Although the blaze was under control an hour and 15 minutes after the general alarm had been sounded, one engine company was kept at the scene until 2 o'clock in the afternoon. A stream of water was directed against the lumber in the north yard continuously until that time to prevent smoldering embers from starting a new fire.

The cause of the fire was not determined, though firemen expressed the opinion that it might have been caused by sparks from a locomotive.

Full Force Kept at Work.

Lewis E. Clark, secretary of the company, said the fire would not interfere with the company's business and that the full crew of employes were working on full time today.

The Huttig company's plant and four other plants in the vicinity of the lumber yards were destroyed by fire June 15, 1911, when the damage was estimated at more than $1,000,000. On the following night the plant of the William G. Frye Manufacturing Co., Tiffany and Vista avenues, in the same neighborhood, was destroyed by fire, and the night after that the warehouse of the Jack Daniel Distilling Co., Duncan and Vandeventer avenues, burned.

Early in February, 1918, workmen employed by the Huttig Co. found a dozen sticks of dynamite with percussion caps and fuses beneath a pile of lumber in the yards.

Fire on Cherokee Street Damages Building and Stocks.

Fire starting on the first floor of a three-story brick building at 2622-24 Cherokee street at 2:45 p. m. yesterday damaged the building $500 and caused other losses as follows: Stock of Christ Link, who conducts a store at 2628 Cherokee street and used a part of the building for a warehouse, $1000; automobile repair shop of Otto Schweitzer, $500; household goods of John Kull, not estimated; saloon of Hans Exas, not estimated; household goods, John J. Colligan, $100, and tailor shop of E. L. Schimmel, not estimated. The cause of the blaze was not ascertained.

STRIKING CLOAKMAKERS PLAN TO GO ON DESPITE INJUNCTION

State Fight Against 49-Hour Week and Piecework Will Be Continued.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Despite the injunction issued Saturday by Justice Alonzo Kinkley of Buffalo, restraining the striking cloakmakers from interfering with the affairs of the 600 or more contractors making up the American Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Association, the strike against the 49-hour week and piecework "will be prosecuted with unabated vigor until its object is fully accomplished."

The language is that of a joint statement issued last night by Benjamin Schlessinger, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and Samuel Untermyer and Morris Hillquit, its counsel. These, on service of the papers today, will immediately take steps to have the injunction vacated or modified.

Because the writ is understood to be returnable Wednesday, it is possible nothing will be done until that time, the net effect being to delay the paying of strike benefits until the Court has had a chance to pass on the merits of the case.

CONVICT PAPER CRITICISES CAPTIONS ON MOVIE FILM

"The Weekly Clarion," Published at State Penitentiary, Also Does Some Moralizing.

Moving picture criticism is a feature of the third number of "The Weekly Clarion," published by prisoners of the Missouri penitentiary at Jefferson City.

"On New Year's day," the Clarion's critic relates, "we suffered five reels of agonizing drivel, 'The Highest Bidder,' taken from the story, 'The Plot,' and we write it up because it deserves some sort of an explanation. We do not understand all that we know about it, but we think no one else does. For example, the remark was thrown upon the screen that "Dinner passed with only a few 'faux pas.' That is French for, 'The avoidupois female monstrosity tied her napkin about her neck and ate with her knife—otherwise her table etiquette was perfect.' But this author has to say 'faux pas.'

"Then the derelict said: 'I will sell my soul to regain any part of my self-respect.' Howthahell can a man regain his self-respect by selling his soul? Quick, Watson, the needle!"

Other features of the issue are an article "Is the Game Worth the Candle?" a demonstration of the folly of crime, and a letter of commendation of the Warden. Samuel Hill, signed by John (Gold Tooth) Kelly. The editor is Richard C. Grey.

NAT GOLDSTEIN MAKES FLYING VISIT TO ELDER

Political Sharps See in Parley a Move to Heed Judge's Candidacy for Federal Bench.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 8.—Nat Goldstein, generalissimo of the St. Louis courthouse ring, flitted into Jefferson City yesterday, held a two-hour chat with Supreme Judge Conway Elder, Republican, and departed just as airily. H earrived on a noon train from St. Louis and started back at 2 p. m.

What was Nat here for? "Oh, nothing special," as usual.

Judge Elder, too, seemed to be at a loss to know why Nat was here, although that rather substantially built St. Louisan had puffed up a hill from the railroad station and made a bee line for the Judge's office, and, departing, had been accompanied by Elder as far as the station.

Republican politicians with whom the incident was discussed, however, take it to mean that the partisan chieftains in St. Louis finally have decided that it might be wise to pay some heed to Elder's candidacy for the prospective new Federal judgeship at St. Louis.

Thought Place Was "Sewed Up."

Heretofore they have paid little attention to Elder's ambition, in the belief that they had the place "sewed up" for Circuit Judge Garesche of St. Louis, for whom they wish to provide in the belief that because of the fight which has been made upon him as a so-called "ring" Republican, he cannot again be re-elected to his present place. In furthering their benelovent, plans for Garesche these leaders are reported to have made numerous proffers of political friendship to Elder and to have told the Supreme Judge that he could have their united support for re-election to the State Supreme bench if he would get out of Garesche's way for the Federal place. This attitude meant quite a concession on the part of the city hall and ring leaders, for Elder, although a St. Louisan, was nominated largely without their help and over open opposition from some of them.

Would Not Quit Federal Race.

Elder is said to have received their honeyed words with appreciative smiles, but declined to be persuaded out of the Federal race thereby. For his friends had persuaded him that he could be renominated for Supreme Judge without a great deal of difficulty, and that the offers didn't mean so much anyhow. And so ended that series of parleys.

A short time ago it became known, however, that Elder had been indorsed for the Federal place by all of his colleagues on the State Supreme Court, Democratic Judges and Commissioners, as well as Republicans, in addition to which it has been reported that Republican National Committeeman Jacob L. Babler has decided to support Elder.

These things carried some disquietude into the Garesche camp, despite Senator Spencer's support of the Circuit Judge, for it was recognized that the indorsement of the Supreme Judges would have some weight at Washington. And the candidates for Federal jobs who have had Babler's support have fared rather well than otherwise despite bitter opposition to some of them.

Then came Goldstein's visit yesterday.

This is regarded as meaning that Elder may become the second or "bandwagon" choice of the St. Louis leaders if, as they now begin to realize it may be, the storm about Garesche's head becomes too intense.

Opposition to Garesche.

For determined opposition to Garesche from civic organizations is beginning to manifest itself and this may prove too great an obstacle for the Circuit Judge to surmount at Washington, especially as a candidate for a Federal judgeship.

It may be that Goldstein came with some other compromise offer designed to eliminate Elder from the race, but his friends placed the other interpretation on the Sunday call.

Judge Elder is serving a two-year term on the Supreme Court, which will expire Dec. 31 next, having been elected in November, 1920, to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Judge Bond. The office will be contested for at the primary and election this year for a 10-year term. Elder, though he has declined to express himself as to that, doubtless will be a candidate for re-election should he fail to land the Federal berth. Republican politicians are inclined to be dubious about the election in Missouri this year, however, hence Elder's friends may be expected to make a hard try for the St. Louis judgeship for him.

PRINCE CUPID'S BODY TO LIE IN STATE ALL THIS WEEK

Removal From Home to Church Is by Torches; Peacock Feathers About Casket.

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, Jan. 9.—Lighted by the flame from the native kukui torches and guarded by descendants of the chieftains, the body of Jonah Kuhio Kalanianaole, Territorial Delegate from Hawaii to Congress, was taken from his Waikiki home to the Kawaiahao church, a distance of four miles, where it will lie in state surrounded by brilliant peacock feathers, the Kahilis emblems of rulership in Hawaii, until Saturday night, when it will be transferred to Iolani Palace, prior to the burial Sunday. Kalanianaole was known as Prince Cupid.

The Hawaiian custom of transferring the dead is at night, especially among royalty.

KROGER COLLECTOR REPORTS LOSING $400 IN HOLDUP

Fred H. Kassmann Telephones That Occupants of Auto Stopped Him on Street.

Fred H. Kassmann, 28 years old, of 2848 Michigan avenue, a collector for the Kroger Stores Co., telephoned the police at 10 o'clock this morning that he had been held up and robbed of $400 a few minutes before by four men, who had evidently trailed him in an automobile, and who leaped from the machine as he was walking to the Kroger store at 1915 East Warne avenue.

Kassmann said that he was approaching the place on foot when the car drew alongside and the men jumped out. One pointed a revolver at him and made him throw up his hands, while the others searched him and took his morning's collections. They then re-entered the machine and drove rapidly away. He described the car as a Buick with an Illinois license.

1874 CHARITY BOARD MEMBERS

These Are Divided Among 80 Boards of Organiaztion, Survey Shows.

The control of St. Louis, charities and philanthropies is unusually democratic, according to a survey of the lists of board members of the 80 organizations which constitute the Community Council of St. Louis, just made by Miss Marie Ketcham and announced by the Community Council today.

Eighteen hundred and seventy-four men and women serve on these 80 boards. None of these persons serves on more than five boards and only eight persons serve on that many. Seventeen persons are members of four boards, 73 of three boards, 290 of two, while the great majority 1557, serve on only one board apiece. The late George Warren Brown, however, served on six boards. Women predominate in board membership, holding 1565 memberships, while men have 509. A mass meeting of board members and workers will be held at 8:15 tomorrow evening in the Central High School auditorium.

ADMITS ROBBERY OF 2 HOUSES

James Robinson, 25 years old, living at a hotel at Twelfth and Market streets, arrested in a pawnshop on Market street yesterday while attempting to sell a watch, admitted to the police that he robbed a residence in Belleville and one in Collinsville early last week.

Jewelry he was trying to pawn and some found in his room, all valued at $160, was identified later by Emil Kerchner, 2303 West Main street, Belleville, whose home was robbed while the family was absent last week. Other articles of jewelry found in a grip Johnston had checked on Eighteenth street were said by Johnston to have been taken from the Collinsville house.

Johnston said he had been sentenced to a year's imprisonment for an infraction of army rules at Camp Meade, Md., and while serving in the detention stockade had escaped Oct. 5 last.

A Pointed Question:

Are you getting ahead of the game?
A little at a time, maybe,
But still ahead?
Or, are you like an engine
That exhausts its entire power
In turning its own balance wheel?
And so has no force left
To do things with?
Putting it in three syllables:
Do you Save?

You worked hard last year.
You did things,
Made things happen,
Helped to shove the world along,
Helped to create wealth.
You came home,
Six days out of seven,
With an appetite for a night's rest
And a trail of actions behind you.
All right!—
What have you got
To show for it?
Money was the measure of your work,
The compensation for it
And, as far as your interest went,
The result of it was money.

The Year is gone:
The Work is gone.
Both are beyond recall.

Largest Hydro-Electric Plant in World Put in Operation Near Niagara Falls

Province of Ontario to Use Energy From 300-Foot Drop of Water of Chippawa Creek; 6,000,000 Tons of Coal to Be Saved Yearly.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TORONTO, Jan. 9.—What will shortly be, by far, the largest hydro-electric power plant in the world was a few days ago formally opened by the Province of Ontario. Though it is part of the development at Niagara Falls, this enterprise takes its name from the little hamlet of Chippawa, situated two or three miles above the Falls, at which point the mighty river has been tapped for this new outburst of utilitarianism.

Here from the days of the Ice Age a little tributary stream known as Chippawa Creek has fallen into the Niagara, adding its mite to the volume of the giant cataract. But Chippawa Creek, unlike Tennyson's brook, has ceased to babble. The first act of the engineers was to make Chippawa Creek turn around and run the other way and its bed was used for the preliminary stages of a canal excavation that may well be classed now with the great canals of the world.

Though long-distance transmission of electric energy, making possible large power schemes, is a development only of this century, the power plants at Niagara Falls have been for a decade world famous. But the new Chippawa enterprise eclipses everything that previously existed at Niagara or anywhere else in the world. The largest of the three plants previously in existence on the Canadian side had a capacity of around 200,000 horsepower. The Chippawa plant will have an ultimate capacity of 650,000 horsepower. The first generator of 55,000 horsepower, itself the largest single generator in the world, was installed in the closing days of 1921. By next December five similar plants will be completed and five other larger units will be ready within five years—barring accidents.

Great Saving in Coal.

Central Canada has no coal of the "black diamond" variety. Therein lies one reason why Ontario is so enthusiastically pursuing the inexhaustible "white coal" procurable from water power. The Chippawa plant alone will save no less than 6,000,000 tons of coal a year which otherwise would have to be imported from the United States. Not only will imports be reduced but there will be a large saving in the cost of power generated, estimated at $30,000,000 a year, as compared with the cost of steam power.

The principle of the Chippawa plant is the same as that of the other hydro-electric power plants in operation at Niagara and elsewhere. It taps the river above the falls, conveys the water to a point below where it is allowed to drop to the river at its lower level, thus generating the power. But Chippawa had complications. In the first place, all "close in" sites having been preempted, a much longer detour around the falls was necessary. Whereas previous plants measured the watercourses they had to construct in yards, the Chippawa figure is in miles. The canal that had to be constructed from the intake at Chippawa Creek to the site of the power plant at Queenston is almost 14 miles long. Both Chippawa and Queenston are historical points in the war of 1812, and the new plant might well be a memorial to the hundred years of peace that was inaugurated with the close of that contest.

Water Drops 300 Feet.

There is one important compensation for the long detour in that it provided a greater drop or "head." Niagara Falls are only 160 feet high but every visitor to Niagara recalls almost as vividly as the falls themselves the madly tumbling rapids above and swiftly swirling whirlpool rapids below. The Chippawa plant takes advantage of both of these cataracts and instead of the drop of 160 feet which the falls alone would provide, it obtains at Queenston a head of 300 feet.

The "head" is an extremely important factor in the amount of power produced. The other factor is volume and having volume in mind, the canal was made just as large as the international treaty governing the amount of water that may be taken from Niagara would permit. Indeed, it is possible the full capacity of the canal cannot be utilized until after an amendment to the treaty has been arranged. In digging the "ditch," 17,382,000 cubic yards of material were taken out. Concrete for lining the bottom and sides was utilized to the extent of 450,000 cubic yards. Geological formations encountered in excavating provided problems reminiscent of Panama, but the courage and capacity of the operating staff were justified, when the gates were lifted, the water actually turned on and the generators started to hum.

Projected in 1913.

The Chippewa development was projected as far back as 1913. In 1914 the war intervened. By 1917, however, such a serious power famine developed, partly due to the demands of munitions plants, that it was found necessary despite labor shortage and high costs to get on with the project as a war precaution if for nothing else. Actual excavation began in March, 1918.

The ultimate cost of the project is a sensitive subject in Ontario. Unfortunately a great part of the construction was carried through during the peak of high prices following the war, and this fact, coupled with the enlargement of the plans, has changed the estimated cost of $10,000,000 into an actual expenditure to date of $55,000,000, with $30,000,000 required to develop maximum capacity. Indeed, some estimates place the final cost at $100,000,000.

Demand for Power.

A national question is whether there is going to be a market for such a vast amount of power. But on this score the promoters have no fears. They have been repeatedly amazed at the appetite for hydro power that has developed as the process of "harnessing Niagara" has proceeded. Today there is a much greater shortage in the Niagara district, although more than 400,000 horsepower is available and 600,000 horsepower is in sight, than there was a decade ago when the Hydro Electric Commission with some trepidation was marketing its first 50,000 horsepower.

Before Chippawa was turned on the commission was actually "short" 70,000 horsepower, which it had to scurry around and buy wherever it could be found and at whatever price could be agreed upon.

Public Ownership Enterprise.

Chippawa as well as nearly all the remaining power development at Niagara on the Canadian side, is exclusively a public ownership enterprise. The executive body is the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission, consisting of three members appointed by and responsible to the Government of the province. The enterprise which has in prospect a total investment of some $220,000,000, is, however, in ownership and operation a municipal one. The 234 municipalities served by the commission are primarily responsible for the investment and for deficits. But there is no need to anticipate deficits. The enterprise monopolizes its field and deficits could be averted by increased rates. The whole tendency of rates since the inception of the commission has, however, been downward.

The chairman and motive power of the Hydro-Electric Commission since its inception has been Sir Adam Beck, a wealthy manufacturer of London, Ont., who has devoted the last 15 years almost exclusively to this piece of public work. He has had a hard fight. In the beginning the public ownership venture was arrayed against a solid phalanx of antagonistic capitalists, holding everywhere franchises for power, lighting and street railway transportation of the type familiar in American cities. One after another these franchises were disposed of. Purchase on equitable terms extinguished a large number including two of the three power companies at Niagara Falls, the only competing transmission line, and the most important of civic franchises. Today public ownership in lighting, power and even street railway transportation has an almost complete monopoly of the whole western peninsula of Ontario, including the city of Toronto. The construction of the Chippawa Plant is a fitting crown for the great monument of public achievement erected by Sir Adam Beck and his associates.

Benefit of Public Ownership.

To consumers the development of Niagara, coupled with the collapse of private monopoly, has been a boon in an era of rising costs. The one account in the monthly budget of a householder in the Niagara area that has been a perennial joy has been his bill for electricity. Again and again prices have been reduced from the level that prevailed before public ownership entered the field. The average monthly account of 60,000 householders in Toronto using electric light is now 87 cents. Ten and twelve room houses brilliantly lighted, and with numerous other electric appliances, frequently cost not more than $3 or $4 a month for electric current. The unexpectedly high cost of installing the Chippawa plant is going to raise the basic average cost of power at Niagara, and this may shortly be reflected in domestic rates. But the saving over previous figures will still be substantial.

Fears that the scenic beauty of Niagara will be impaired by the huge additional absorption of water that will be required by the Chippawa works are held to be groundless. Experts declare that the loss of water will, in the world-famous Horseshoe, be absolutely inappreciable.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—An earthquake of moderate intensity, probably centering 2540 miles southwest of Chicago, was recorded by the instruments at the University of Chicago last night. The first tremors were felt at 11:17 p. m. and the wave reached its greatest intensity at 11:28, finally dying out at 2:15 this morning.

BELGIUM, BRITAIN AND ITALY TO JOIN TO GUARD FRANCE

Lloyd George and Briand Said to Be Near "Accord" After Game of Golf With Bonar Law.

RATHENAU TO HEAD GERMAN DELEGATION

Financial Expert to Go to Paris in Response to Supreme Council's Invitation to Send Representatives.

By the Associated Press.

CANNES, France, Jan. 9.—Premiers Lloyd George and Briand are on the point of agreeing on the essential features of a pact for the protection of France from possible German aggression, which the British say will not be an alliance, but a sort of general accord, in which Belgium and Italy will be included, it was declared today in well-informed quarters.

This announcement came after it had been stated that an alliance would be discussed during a morning threesome at golf which the two Premiers arranged with Bonar Law.

Official circles insisted the announcement that a defensive pact between France and Great Britain had been agreed upon would be premature, but doubt was no longer expressed among observers that the British and French Prime Ministers were near an agreement upon some such arrangement as that outlined.

The French Argument.

The French argument, which is understood to have had the most force with the British delegates, was that if the co-operation of all Europe was required for economic restoration, as the British had insisted an assurance of peace and tranquillity was even more necessary. The Genoa conference, from the French viewpoint, would have full effect only if Europe weer assured it could work in peace.

Premier Briand impressed on Lloyd George that France was not seeking an alliance because of fear alone. She was able to protect herself, the French Premier pointed out, but that was not sufficient for the general tranquillity of Europe, without which the economic and financial measures proposed would be ineffective.

Meanwhile the reparations experts are continuing their discussions.

Belgium's delegates are still standing out for her priority in full of 2,500,000,000 gold marks of the German payments. The proposed increase in Germany's cash payments for 1922 from the 500,000,000 gold marks agreed on in London to 700,000,000, only partly satisfies the Belgians.

Meeting Yesterday.

Briand and Lloyd George at their first talk yesterday on the future relations between France and Britain are understood to have gone over broadly the principal questions, this being necessary to settle the order and form the basis of a closer entente pact of alliance.

Talk of a Franco-British alliance for mutual defense has created a strong undercurrent of opinion here, notwithstanding that the atmosphere has seemed to be little favorable to negotiations tending to make the relations between the two countries closer. Briand and Lloyd George appear far apart regarding the attitude the allies ought to take toward Germany after the default in the payment of reparations, and are not at all in accord as to whether the explanations ought to be heard at Cannes.

Briand for Alliance.

Council circles are much agitated by reports from Paris that a treaty has been signed, but the only document known to exist touching upon the question of an alliance is a memorandum which sets forth reasons as a basis for such a pact. M. Briand's flat declaration for an alliance before he departed from Paris made a marked impression on the British, who advanced the argument that it would be easier to deal with France on European questions, if she were not able to hold forth as an argument on her part failure to secure from the United States guarantees for her security, such as would have been given her if the Versailles tripartite agreement had been ratified.

The decision to discuss the situation in Asia Minor here, instead of at Paris at a later date, is interpreted as a move to do away with all subjects in controversy between the two countries, so as to clear the way for a convention covering all European and Eastern questions.

Rathenau to Head German Delegation to Go to Cannes.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 9.—Dr. Walter Rathenau, the German financial expert, will head the German delegation which is to proceed to Paris prior to going to Cannes to appear before the Supreme Council to discuss German reparations.

The German delegation will include Herr Schroeder and Herr Hirsch, Undersecretaries of State for Finance and Economics; Karl Bergmann, former Secretary of State for Paris, "he has made up his mind to exclude a Franco-British alliance. He hopes to succeed where former Premier Clemenceau failed."

The Figaro said: "News of an Anglo-French treaty has been received in political circles here with satisfaction. Should the reports be confirmed, nothing but happy consequences may be derived by France."

"The Constitution demands," declared L'Homme Libre, "that the Chamber of Deputies meet on the second Tuesday of January, and the Chamber could have nothing better to do than to ratify an Anglo-French defensive alliance, which is so badly needed."

The Petit Journal asserted: "Conditional upon acceptance by France of the task of collaborating in the reconstruction of Central Europe, new guarantees have been extended to this country by Great Britain. These guarantees should be more efficacious than the tripartite agreement reached during the Versailles conference, which was satisfactory to France."

Italian Newspapers Welcome Coming Conference at Genoa.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Jan. 9.—General satisfaction is expressed in Italy over the proposed international and economic conference at Genoa, decided upon by the Allied Supreme Council Friday. The press is especially pleased that an Italian city has been chosen and prediction is made that it will mean the rebirth of Italian trade.

The Giornale d'Italia says: "The salient fact of the Cannes deliberations is the identity in the views of Italy and England. There seems, however, an opinion that Italy may be exploited as a German field. We must defend ourselves against this, not only by tariff barriers, but we must take the offensive against German competition by trying to capture the markets of the Near East. At Genoa will be initiated our insurrection."

The Corriere d'Italia says: "The Cannes conference has assumed noteworthy importance. It is a milestone in Europe reconstruction. Allied solidarity will have a tangible result at Genoa, benefiting the whole of Europe."

The Tribuna says the fact that Russia and Germany have been invited is the surest guarantee of a prosperous future.

The Treasury, and other financial, authorities.

The German press generally is pleased over the invitation to attend the reparations discussion.

The Deutsche Allgemaine Zeitung is troubled by apprehensions of possible allied control of the German financial administration.

The Vorwaerts says a great advance has been made through Dr. Wirth's policy of honest fulfillment of the treaty obligations.

Paris Papers View With Hope Reports of Alliance With Britain.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 9.—Reports from Cannes that Premiers Briand and Lloyd George are negotiating an alliance between France and Great Britain are given great prominence by newspapers of this city. For the most part, editorial comment on the news is commendatory.

"Since his experience in Washington, which induced M. Briand to renounce close co-operation with America," remarked the Echo de

MANUFACTURING DOUBLED IN ST. LOUIS IN 5-YEAR PERIOD; WHOLE STATE MADE BIG GAIN

Investments in City Exceed Half Billion, Products Being Worth $871,700,000, While Wage Totals Are Twice Those of 1914.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Manufacturing in Missouri developed tremendously during the five-year period, 1914-1919, the Census Bureau of the Department of Commerce reported today.

The report, compiled from the 1920 census, covers conditions as they existed in the calendar year 1919 and is shown for cities of Missouri having a population of 10,000 or more. Hand and building trades and neighborhood industries are excluded, the census taking account only of the establishments conducted under the so-called factory system.

In St. Louis the value of output of goods more than doubled, while the money invested was nearly 100 per cent greater than in 1914.

Wages More Than Doubled.

Capital invested in manufacturing in St. Louis in 1919 amounted to $575,938,000, a jump from $314,728,000 in 1914, or 83 per cent. The total amount paid for services in 1919 was $158,550,000 as compared with $75,123,000 in 1914, or 111.1 per cent increase. For salaries the increase was from $23,973,000 to $49,993,000, or 108.5. For wages the increase was from $51,150,000 to $108,557,000, or 112.2 per cent increase.

Materials jumped from $202,806,000 to $540,826,000, an increase of 165.4 per cent, while the value of products expanded from $360,480,000 to $871,700,000, or 141.8 per cent. This, it was explained, was their selling value at the plants, whether actually sold or not.

The report further shows that the value added by manufacture, which is the value of the products less the cost of materials, increased from $156,674,000 to $330,874,000, or 111.2 per cent.

Number of Factories Grows.

The number of establishments in St. Louis increased from 2787 to 3205, or 15 per cent.

The persons engaged in manufacturing increased from 104,187 to 185,425, or 30 per cent. Of these it is shown that proprietors and firm members increased from 1900 to 2204, or 16 per cent; salaried employes from 17,229 to 25,302, or 46.9 per cent; and wage earners (average) from 85,058 to 107,919, or 26.9 per cent.

The primary horsepower used in manufactures increased from 169,982 to 195,697, or 15.1 per cent.

Kansas City Makes Progress.

For Kansas City the following figures are shown:

Capital increased from $63,341,000 to $83,009,000, or 55.6 per cent; services from $15,518,000 to $34,653,000, or 123.3 per cent; cost of materials from $31,981,000 to $124,310,000, or 288.7 per cent; and value of products from $60,953,000 to $192,815,000, or 216.3 per cent.

Jefferson City had an increase in invested capital from $4,537,000 to $5,683,000, or 25.3 per cent; and in value of products from $8,087,000 to $10,188,000, or 26 per cent.

Cape Girardeau had an invested capital increase from $3,074,000 to $4,854,000, or 58.2 per cent, and an increase in value of products from $3,888,000 to $8,587,000, or 120.8 per cent.

Every City Shows Big Gain.

Columbia had an increase in invested capital from $1,414,000 to $1,752,000, or 23.9 per cent; and in value of products from $1,270,000 to $2,232,000, or 75.8 per cent.

Hannibal had an increase in invested capital from $4,066,000 to $6,729,000, or 65.9 per cent, and in value of products from $6,215,000 to $14,027,000, or 126.7 per cent.

Joplin had an increase in invested capital from $4,038,000 to $10,114,000, or 150.5 per cent, and an increase in value of products from $5,950,000 to $14,220,000, or 139 per cent.

Moberly had an increase in invested capital from $2,066,000 to $2,451,000, or 18.6 per cent, and in value of products from $3,137,000 to $4,497,000, or 43.4 per cent.

St. Joseph had an increase in invested capital from $10,854,000 to $25,066,000, or 130.9 per cent, and in value of products from $17,068,000 to $50,697,000, or 197 per cent.

Sedalia had an increase in invested capital from $2,386,000 to $2,851,000, or 19.5 per cent, and in value of products from $2,922,000 to $5,562,000, or 90.4 per cent.

Springfield had an increase in invested capital from $7,010,000 to $12,857,000, or 83.4 per cent, and in value of products from $6,193,000 to $18,813,000, or 203.8 per cent.

NORTH DAKOTA EXCISE TAXES HELD INVALID

Supreme Court Reverses District Body's Finding on Railroad Business Within State.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The excise taxes imposed by North Dakota on railroads within the State were held by the Supreme Court today to be invalid. The case in which the decision was rendered was on appeal from the United States District Court, which sustained a tax assessed on the business of railroads within the State. The tax was opposed on the ground that it was levied on interstate commerce and for a period within which the railroads were under Federal control.

The Court ordered the reargument of the case brought by the Government against the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific Railway companies. The case involves the question of the ownership and control of the Central Pacific by the Southern Pacific. The case was set for argument on March 13.

The Court also ordered a reargument of the West Virginia-Pennsylvania-Ohio Gas cases on Feb. 27, with special reference to several of the questions involved. The question which the Court indicated it desired emphasized are whether the suits were not prematurely brought, as no action has been taken either by the states or by the state commissioners under the statute, and whether the cases present a cause justiciable between the states parties to the action.

TWO DISSENTING OPINIONS FILED IN BEECH-NUT CASE

Justices Holmes and McReynolds Give Their Reasons for Being in Minority in 5-to-4 Decision.

UNFAIR COMPETITION QUESTION AT ISSUE

Both the Judges Hold Defendant Company Has Undoubted Right to Sell to Whom It Will.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Another 5-to-4 decision has been added to the Supreme Court records by the finding in the Beech-Nut Packing Co. case. The majority opinion, written by Justice Day and concurred in by four other members of the court, including Chief Justice Taft, held that the Federal Trade Commission was within its legal rights in ordering the Beech-Nut company to desist from its practice of requiring wholesalers, jobbers and retailers to maintain a fixed price for its products.

"The system here disclosed," says the majority opinion, "necessarily constitutes a scheme which restrains the natural flow of commerce and the freedom of competition in the channels of interstate trade which it has been the purpose of all the anti-trust acts to maintain. In its practical operation it necessarily constrains the trader, if he would have the products of the Beech-Nut company, to maintain the prices 'suggested' by it.

How System Is Maintained.

"If he fails to do so he is subject to be reported to the company either by special agents, numerous and active in that behalf, or by dealers whose aid is enlisted in maintaining the system and the prices fixed by it. Furthermore, he is enrolled upon a list known as 'undesirable—price cutters,' to whom goods are not to be sold, and who are only to be reinstated as one whose record is 'clear' and to whom sales may be made upon his giving satisfactory assurance that he will not resell the goods of the company except at the prices suggested by it, and will refuse to sell to distributors who do not maintain such prices."

Two dissenting opinions were filed, one by Justice Holmes, with the concurrence of Justices McKenna and Brandeis, and the other by Justice McReynolds.

Justice Holmes, in his opening sentence, seems to take cognizance of the fact that he is frequently found disagreeing with the majority. "There are obvious limits of propriety," he says, "to the persistent expression of opinions that do not command the agreement of the court. But," he adds, "as this case presents a somewhat new field—the determination of what is unfair competition within the meaning of the Federal Trade Commission act—I venture a few words to explain my dissent."

Holmes Explains Dissent.

This explanation, which is characteristic of Justice Holmes in its freedom from legalistic verbiage, is as follows:

"The ground on which the respondent is held guilty is that its conduct has a dangerous tendency unduly to hinder competition or to create monopoly. It is enough to say that this I cannot understand. So far as the Sherman act is concerned, I had supposed that its policy was aimed against attempts to create a monopoly in the doers of the condemned act or to hinder competition with them.

"Of course there can be nothing of that sort here. The respondent already has the monopoly of its own goods with the full assent of the law and no one can compete with it with regard to those goods, which are the only ones concerned. It seems obvious that the respondent is not creating a monopoly in them for anyone else, although I see nothing to hinder its doing so by conveying them all to one single vendee.

"The worst that can be said, so far as I can see, is that it hinders competition among those who purchase from it. But it seems to me that the very foundation of the policy of the law to keep competition open is that the subject matter of the competition would be open to all but for the hindrance complained of. I cannot see what that policy has to do with a subject matter that comes from a single hand that is admitted to be free to shut as closely as it will. And to come back to the words of the statute, I cannot see how it is unfair competition to say to those to whom the respondent sells and to the world, 'You can have my goods only on the terms that I propose,' when the existence of any competition in dealing with them depends upon the respondent's will.

See No Wrong in Plan.

"I see no wrong in so doing, and if I did I should not think it a wrong within the possible scope of the word unfair. Many unfair devices have been exposed in suits under the Sherman act, but to whom the respondent's conduct is unfair I do not understand."

Justice McReynolds, in the other dissenting opinion, cites previous decisions of the Court as showing that the company, since no question of monopoly was involved, "certainly had the clear right freely to select its customers—to refuse to deal when and as it saw fit—and to announce that future sales would be limited to those whose conduct met with its approval."

The opinion concludes:

"Having the undoubted right to sell to whom it will, why should respondent be enjoined from writing down the names of dealers regarded as undesirable customers? Nor does there appear to be any wrong in maintaining special salesmen who turn over orders to selected wholesalers and who honestly investigate and report to their principal the treatment accorded its products by dealers.

"Finally, as respondent may freely select customers, how can injury result from marks on packages which enable it to trace their movements? The privilege to sell or not to sell at will surely involves the right by open and honest means to ascertain what selected customers do with goods voluntarily sold to them.

"Exercise of Right Not Unfair."

"Under the circumstances disclosed, constraint upon the freedom of merchants can only result from withholding trade relations or threatening so to do. These, when acting alone, respondent may assume or decline at pleasure, there being neither monopoly nor attempt to monopolize. And the exercise of this right does not become an unfair method of competition merely because some dealers cannot obtain goods which they desire, and others may be deterred from selling at reduced prices. If a manufacturer should limit his customers to consumers he would thereby destroy competition among dealers, but neither they nor the public could complain."

HAYNES GIVES FIGURES TO REFUTE WET PROPAGANDA

Dry Enforcement May Never Reach 100 Per Cent, He Says, but Headway Is Being Made.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—The prohibition law is not a failure and while enforcement of it probably never will reach the 100 per cent point of efficiency, it rapidly is approaching the highest possible point, R. A. Haynes, national prohibition director, said yesterday in an address before the Law Enforcement League of Chicago.

No law can be enforced 100 per cent, Haynes said, declaring that the chief present obstacles in enforcement of the Volstead act were apathetic citizens and lethargic public officials. These types, he said, in opposing the law, were striking unintentionally at their own interests and at the foundation of the country, and might be threatening it with the downfall which he said had come to every republic in history which had failed to enforce the laws its citizens made for themselves.

Answers Wet Figures.

"The 'wets' have spread carefully planned propaganda to make it appear that the prohibition law is a failure and cannot be enforced," said Haynes. "The best antidote for this propaganda is facts and here are a few:

"The propagandists put in capital letters the liquor imported into this country. The facts show that the total importations during the past fiscal year were one-half of one per cent of the total consumption of liquor in the United States the year before prohibition.

"Propaganda says crime has increased since prohibition. Facts show that the crime wave is worldwide and that it would be just as sensible to blame it on woman suffrage as on prohibition. Facts show that arrests for drunkenness have decreased 60 per cent in this country since prohibition and convictions for drunkenness increased about the same per cent in wet England.

Facts show that liquor withdrawals from warehouses in this country during the past October were only 50 per cent of the withdrawals in the previous October."

Headway Being Made.

Maj. Haynes said reports from his district directors showed that Federal, State and city officials were co-operating almost everywhere and great headway was being made against those opposing law enforcement.

"When I think of the persons opposing enforcement of one of our laws, I think of the fate of other republics when they reached the point of failing to enforce their laws. We regard the republic as an imperishable form of government, yet we are only 150 years old. Venice was a republic for 1100 years, Carthage for 700 years, Florence for 1200 years and Rome, 500 years. All of them fell and they fell when they failed to enforce their laws."

WILSON ACKNOWLEDGES FAITH PLEDGE OF TENNESSEE CLUB

Telegraph His Gratification at Expression of Confidence in His World Peace Efforts.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—When the Tennessee Society of New York held its eighteenth annual dinner at the Hotel Commodore last Thursday night, a telegram was sent to Woodrow Wilson. The message assured the former President the society felt his work to bring world peace was bearing fruit and that in time he would be vindicated by the peoples of the world for his stand on the League of Nations.

Malcolm Meacham, president of the Tennessee Society, received the following telegram from Mr. Wilson yesterday:

"Pray accept for self, and when you have the opportunity convey to the other members of your society, my heartfelt thanks for the message you sent me in their name and by which I have been greatly heartened and profoundly gratified. I hope that the new year may bring to you personally and to all members of the society the fortunes which satisfy and make for permanent happiness. I am touched by their confidence in me."

AMERICAN SHIPPING IMPROVES TO WEST COAST OF SOUTH AMERICA

Foreign Bottoms, However, Are Carrying Bulk of Cargo to East Coast of Continent.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Foreign ships are carrying the bulk of the cargo between this country and the east coast of South America and are increasing their proportion, although American ships are making a better showing on the routes to and from the west coast of that continent, according to a survey issued by the Commerce Department.

During the first 10 months of 1921, the survey said, trade with the east coast of South America constituted about 5 per cent of the total foreign trade of this country, exports being twice as large as imports.

In the case of the north and south Atlantic coast traffic, 71 per cent was carried by foreign ships, the survey showed, while trade between the Gulf coast ports and the east coast of South America was divided between American and foreign ships on a 37 and 63 per cent basis, respectively. The small amount of cargo moving between Pacific coast ports and the east coast of South America, the survey added, was all carried in American vessels.

According to the department, American ships are carrying 52 per cent of the cargo between the Atlantic coast and the west coast of South America, 68 per cent for the American Gulf coast and 54 per cent for the Pacific coast. For the first 10 months of 1921, the total volume of trade between this country and the west coast of South America, amounted to about 1,000,000 long tons, or less than 2 per cent of the total of the imports and exports of this country.

HAUSER AGAIN HEADS CENTRAL TRADES AND LABOR UNION

All Other Officers Re-elected and Two Women Named to Serve on Committees of the Body.

Joseph J. Hauser, 4723 South Broadway, secretary of the Brewers and Malsters' Union, was unanimously re-elected president of the Central Trades and Labor Union yesterday afternoon. He served as president from 1913 to 1916 and was again elected July 11, 1920, to fill the unexpired term of Joseph Woracek, resigned. He has since held the office, having been re-elected in January, 1921.

All other officers of the Central Trades and Labor Union were re-elected for the ensuing year, including David Kreyling, secretary and organizer, who has occupied that position since July, 1900. Miss Olive King of the Waitresses' Union was chosen to serve on the Legislative Committee and Mrs. Bessie Brooks Kerr of the same union on the Law Committee.

A resolution urging the Board of Aldermen to act promptly in regard to the proposition to petition Congress to permit the manufacture of light wines and beer was adopted.

The Trades Union Educational League reported that it had organized in 17 wards and held 25 meetings in December. A suggestion to establish a trades label tag day to raise funds for carrying on the work of the league in its fight against the open-shop movement was referred to the secretary.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Newswriter on Newspapers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

HEYWOOD BROUN (whom you quote) observes that the newswriting of today lacks the vividness of 20 years ago. He laments the passing of the great reporters of other days and the absence of worthy successors. Mr. Broun is himself a writer of ability, and was a great reporter of the school he mourns.

True, the news columns of today are stupid, insipid and colorless. One feels, in starting to read the average news story, that he is tackling something stale, indigestible and compact. The opening bromide repels him; the flat phrase, the battered adjective and the inept verb rise up to choke him. It is like sawdust in the mouth.

But come to the reason: You will not find it in the quality of the men. Never was so enlightened and intelligent a class of men enrolled on the staffs of the newspapers. Never was so much erudition and keen perception to be found in the newspaper offices. The reporters of today are bigger men, in every way, than ever in the history of journalism. Their interests are wider, their vision larger, their intellectual habits more elevated than 20 years ago. They are capable of producing better literature than the companions of Mr. Broun's youth. And they want to do it.

Let the newspapers blame themselves. They have erected a system of editing which ruthlessly suppresses anything smacking of style. The unwonted spark is quickly smothered, and its very appearance is regarded as having the odor of scandal. The exploitation of any individual writer is studiously avoided. "The paper or the thing"—just as in Prussia the state was the thing. They are interested, they propound, in nothing save the impartial presentation of facts. It is not necessary to point out that the atmosphere—the spirit—of a situation are as much a part of the truth as ages, addresses and other statistics religiously and laboriously set forth. The result frequently is a distorted and misleading picture for the reader. Let no man deny it.

All newspaper men who are alive to their surroundings (there it goes—the habit of the stereotyped phrase, once battered into one, is hard to lose!) know this to be the case. They feel the fine, volatile, spontaneous thing in them being killed in cold blood; they know the agony of spiritual suffocation; they see literature, where the newspapers are concerned, dying the death. More tragic than all, they are privy to the fact that the whole truth in every day sacrificed to a fetish called "the bare facts"—and they are helpless.

A NEWSWRITER.

PLEASE use your influence to have the Compton cars stop on both sides of Grand avenue on Shenandoah, as there is no protection from the weather there and the traffic is so heavy on Grand avenue that walking across is dangerous.

SUBSCRIBER.

Roll Reed.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHEN James A. Reed in 1910 ran against D. R. Francis for the United States Senate, he won largely by discrediting Francis with Missouri Democrats as being out of harmony with his party because of Francis' alleged defection on the gold and silver issues of 1896.

With the senatorial election now in sight once more and the obvious intention of Reed to stand for re-election, Reed's time of reckoning is at hand. They say chickens come home to roost. If that's so, I sincerely hope the Democrats of Missouri will not forget that Reed is out of harmony with his party in 1922 on the issues of 1919, which are vastly more vital to the peace of the world than were the issues of 1896.

If it was right for the Democrats to roll Francis in 1910 as being out of harmony with the party at that time, then why is it not equally right to roll Reed in 1922 as being out of harmony with the party now? By his own petard shall Reed be hoisted. For a campaign slogan, therefore, I suggest the appropriateness and the form of a Democratic watchword—Roll Reed.

Safety.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

HAS the pedestrian any right to use the street in getting from one sidewalk to the other? Some automobile owners seem to think not, from the way they turn around corners on two wheels, without letting the pedestrian know what he is going to do.

TIRED OF JUMPING.

Dry Logic.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THESE prohibition laws can't be enforced and should be repealed. Our laws against banditry ought to be repealed—they can't be enforced. Every day and every night we have holdups. Our laws against thieving ought to be repealed also; thieves are getting in their work on every hand. Our laws against murder ought to be repealed; our newspapers are full of accounts of murder. Laws against kidnaping, against gambling, against carrying weapons and a number of other things ought to be repealed; it is evident that they can't be enforced. Why not, through your popular paper, advocate the repeal of a lot of these laws that can't be carried into effect.

IRELAND'S OPPORTUNITY.

The profound satisfaction not only in Ireland and England, but throughout the democratic peoples of the civilized world over the ratification of the Irish-British treaty is tempered with anxiety by the announcement that the fight for a republic would be continued by the opponents of the treaty in the Dail Eireann. The fight, it was threatened, would be directed against both the provisional government of Ireland and the Government of Great Britain.

Undoubtedly the organizing and establishing of the new dominion government of the Irish Free State might be seriously handicapped by determined opposition on the part of the strong body of Irish leaders who on various platforms opposed the treaty. They might, by bitter and violent opposition, endanger the success of the dominion plan of government under the treaty.

The cheering factor in the situation, however, is the apparent support of the treaty and its governmental plan by the people of South Ireland. The Irish people must be reckoned with and the acceptance of the treaty by the masses of the Irish people will place the opposition leaders in a helpless position. They will be leaders without followers. The Dail Eireann as the representative assembly of a republic will cease to exist on the organization of the provisional government and a dominion Parliament elected by the people under the treaty will take its place.

It is hardly possible that the treaty's opponents will attempt armed resistance to the provisional government. It is incredible that they would start a civil war in Ireland and thus strengthen the opposition of Ulster and of the reactionaries in England to self-government in Ireland. The principle of self-determination, that germ of liberty which is working for freedom among all the oppressed races and nationalities, as Mr. Griffith aptly said, must be recognized as the governing principle in Ireland with reference to her own government as well as in her relations to Great Britain. It has won in the struggle against British oppression and it must win in the struggle to maintain the Irish Free State.

The hope of the friends of Irish liberty centers upon the Irish people. The solution of the problem of self-government and the realization of the opportunity to work out the destiny of the Irish Free State rest with them. If they determine to gain all the benefits of the substance of freedom Great Britain has been forced to yield them in the treaty the bitterness engendered by years of strife will vanish and peace with prosperity will come in full measure to troubled Ireland. The division in the ranks of Irish leaders will result in political parties seeking their ends by peaceful agitation. It was to be expected that the Irish struggle for independence would leave many scars and the compromise would bring disappointments, but the successful establishment of the dominion government will work wonders of healing. Certainly all the influence of the friends and supporters of Irish independence outside of Ireland, and particularly in America, should be devoted to this goal.

MIRACLE OF MAN AND RACE.

To find in the story of the white race a civilization comparable to that of Japan when Marquis Okuma, who was reported to have died last Friday at the age of 83, was a young man, we should have to go back probably to the dark ages that followed the fall of Rome. It has taken our shining race dozens of generations to advance from that crude epoch to its present goal. In Japan this gulf has been bridged in the life of a single man.

When Japan's War Premier was a youth his country was steeped in the sleep of the ages. It was ruled by a Shogun through a system of clan government. Its religion was characterized by the usual attributes of the Oriental faith—intolerance, superstition, ignorance. The learning of the nation was confined to the Chinese classics. An embargo had been raised against Occidental civilization and progress.

Then Perry came and implanted the germ of discontent in the spirit of young Japan. Against the tradition of his fathers, against the institutions of the day and his people's instilled hatred of change and progress, Okuma turned his eyes to the great world beyond Nippon and set his mind deliberately to the business of learning, of clearing out the cobwebs of centuries and teaching his countrymen. Thus he rose to leadership in Japan's breakneck race to wipe out the ages of her delinquency.

The world is not through gasping at his prodigious accomplishment. World politics has been revolutionized. A new empire has arisen out of the East in the van of other empires. It is the miracle of a race. Yet no less is it the miracle of a man. The life of Okuma, the span across 10 centuries of mental evolution, is a staggering exhibit for the Anglo-Saxon bourbon whose stodgy and puffing efforts have not availed to keep him abreast of his own time.

Let those of the earth who look to the past for their inspiration look studiously upon the recent past of Japan.

A COMMON CAUSE OF PROGRESS.

The International Joint Commission on the proposed Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway has reported unanimously in favor of the project, which calls for the enormous expenditure of $252,725,000. The report now has been submitted to the Canadian Government and to our State Department, which will transmit it within a few days to Congress.

There we are assured of a lively fight between the various interested sections of the country. New York and Boston have opposed the entire conception from the start. Their opposition, of course, is one of special interest. They fear the diversion of trade hitherto confined to their ports.

The clash of interests is destined to become broader as signified, for example, by an article in a Baltimore newspaper recently quoted on this page. As New York and Boston are covetous of the Great Lakes ports, so Baltimore is fearful of New Orleans and St. Louis. From their local point of view these cities are justified in their apprehension. It is inevitable that they should not enjoy indefinitely all the traffic they have hitherto handled by rail from the American hinterland.

The great natural waterways of America—the St. Lawrence and Mississippi systems—are the logical outlets of the great produce areas of interior America. These outlets have been suppressed for a time, owing to low rail rates and the want of waterway improvements. Higher freight rates have made the use of waterways an economic necessity, while the awakening of the Western cities and states and the growth of engineering facilities have made waterway improvement feasible.

Waterway improvements, therefore, are bound to come. Eastern port cities may oppose and obstruct them for a time, but in the end they must yield. Recognizing a common cause they undoubtedly will stand together in their opposition. It behooves the waterway states, therefore, to stand together in their support. Mississippi improvements should be considered first because of the smaller outlay in proportion to results. But the cause of waterways is a common cause of progress.

PLEASURE IN EXILE.

At Gilliam, Mo., professional dancers are in a class with hoboes and potential porch climbers. The City Council a few nights ago visited the town dance hall where the Argentine tango and other jazzy things were being taught. The next morning instructor and instructress slid out of town with the Town Marshal in charge of ceremonies. Now public dances in that decorous community are no more. And with them go the pool halls and shooting galleries.

It is not with an active sense of alarm that we watch these proceedings. No, public dance halls, theaters and cabarets in St. Louis do not appear to stand in immediate danger of being locked and sealed by the authorities of the law. But the local purview is often deceiving. It is not their local administrations that American cities need fear. It is the Main Streeters who do not shrink to work even through the Constitution.

HE "SAW" ARKANSAS.

Arkansas lost a friend when Jacob D. Goldman, St. Louis cotton merchant, died. He was its friend when its friends were few and when it was the fashion to grin at every mention of its name. He believed in it then and always since and backed his belief. Wagering a lifetime of enterprise and effort against widespread disparagement, he won a fortune.

But he did a great deal more than that. He helped a State live down a joke. That is the hardest thing for a State or a community or an individual to live down. Offenses or shortcomings may be forgiven but a quip that makes the world laugh is not forgotten, though it contains little truth or none at all.

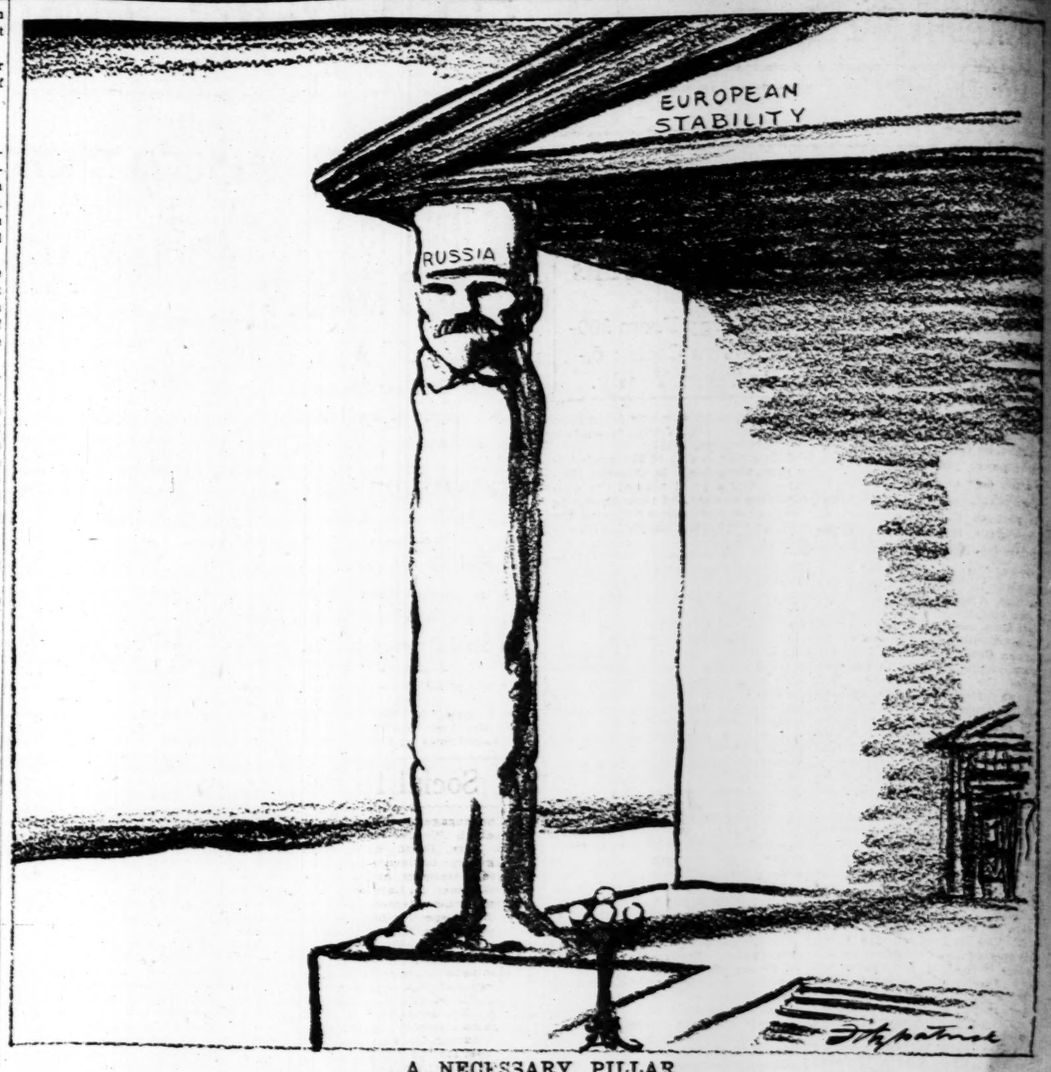

Arkansas suffered from that. The mention of it brought the picture of the horseback traveler asking the fiddling native why he did not mend his roof and the native's answer that when it rained it was too wet and in fair weather it didn't need fixing. It was unfair because Arkansas-at-large was never like that. But the world likes to laugh and it does not inquire too closely whether the laugh is fair.

Goldman probably did much to prove that Arkansas was not like that. He also did much to "sell" St. Louis to Arkansas. Both enterprises were profitable to him, but as is always the way, the benefits derived by the pioneer and the man of vision are less than the benefits conferred upon a doubting and deriding generation.

If Arkansas ever was a joke it was a joke on those who did not believe in Arkansas.

THE PATIENT IS FEELING MUCH BETTER.

PANETELA.

NO, Luella,
Submarining
Did not make
A lot of friends;
After all,
It wasn't truly
Serving anybody's ends.
While it fairly
Scourged the ocean,
Spreading terror
Far and wide,
Every time
It drowned somebody
Millions joined
The other side.

Let us therefore
Not deceive us
As to what
It is about:
Human mercy
And compassion
Have but scarce
Begun to sprout.
While we still
Use bombs and cannon,
Bidding death
Attend their train,
Let us not
Be quite so silly
As to think
We are humane.

Submarining
Didn't pay us;
Wherefore, lo,
We cut it out!
Crazy people
Fighting battles
Still must know
What they're about.
Some things blowing
Us to atoms
Still enjoy
The world's respect;
And in war,
The same as fashion,
One must always
Be correct.

In a better time,
My dearie,
When our thoughts
Are not so fussed,
War and all
His cruel captains
In their turn
Shall bite the dust.
Though we pick
And choose among them,
In its time
The truth shall strike,
And we may
At length discover
That they all
Are just alike.

So we have it,
Sweet Luella:
Be of cheer,
Whate'er betide:
Out of darkness
Into reason
Is a long
And bumpy ride.
One can only
Fix one's vision
On the sky
Afar and blue,
Sort of hoping,
Like the British,
That we'll somehow
Muddle through.

What Prominent Public People Think of the Disarmament Conference in Washington, D. C.

Prof. Absalom Absent, professor of astronomy at Quinceton University, says: "I forgot what I wanted to say, but if I hadn't I would say exactly what I intended to. After all, I had nothing really important to say, so we'll let it go at that."

Alcibiades Bobo, champion tobacco juice slinger of Mudville Corners, Ok., says: "If the conference people hope for it to succeed, I would suggest that they give Sumatra control of the fig-raising industry in the Fiji Islands. I fail to see what this has to do with the disarmament conference, but still it sounds interesting, anyway."

Mr. Pericles Pook, American Ambassador to Madagascar, says: "As all my information concerning the conference has been obtained through reading H. G. Wells' reports of it in the newspapers, I must confess I do not know what it is all about. However, I am of the opinion that there can be only two outcomes. Either the conference will succeed or fail."

Miss Olympia Buckteeth, kindergarten teacher of New York City, who once saw Baron Kato and therefore is in a position to speak authoritatively on the subject, says: "The conference can never be a success for one vital reason. The men who called it failed to extend an invitation to Switzerland, which country could exert an important influence on the future destinies of the world. It is now a well-known fact that for two years prior to the signing of the armistice, the German army was solely fed on Swiss cheese imported from Switzerland. When, however, the manufacturing of it ceased, due to a nation-wide strike of cheese-drillers, what was the ultimate result? The surrender of the Teutonic army. That is not all. Switzerland has just recently averted a war between Iceland and Patagonia by refusing to sell her well-known product to either side. She could do the same in case of a war between the principal Powers."

A STRANGE DREAM.

One warm spring morning I was sitting in a grape vine swing listening to the songs of the birds and the hum of many insects. I was beginning to feel rather drowsy when I chanced to glance down at my feet and was very much surprised to see a stream of water flowing along. As I was always of an adventurous nature and had also a large amount of curiosity, I decided to follow the stream to see where it ran, and follow I did. It was early in the morning when I started. Birds were singing, insects humming, while the flowers and small, graceful willows that grew on both sides of the stream made it a beautiful place. I continued to follow the stream and at last came to a deep ravine. Upon entering the ravine, lo! what a change. Where the clear sparkling water had been was now a stream of blood, flowing sluggishly. No flowers or willows were to be seen. Only dead trees stripped of their branches and standing like skeletons and withered grasses were there. No song of bird or hum of insect was heard. All was silent as the grave. I was amazed and startled at the sudden change and stood wondering what was the cause of it, when suddenly the stillness was broken by a voice which spoke these words to me:

"You wonder what is the cause of such a strange and startling change. Bear well in mind what I tell you. The cause is war!"

The voice ceased as suddenly as it had begun and although I waited quite awhile it did not speak again. Suddenly the ground gave way under me and I found myself going down, down, down, till at last I landed with a bump. Upon looking around I found that I had fallen asleep and had also fallen out of the swing and struck my head on the ground.

PARTY STRENGTH IN GERMANY.

S. Miles Bouton of Associated Press in Atlantic Monthly.

THE existence of a monarchist majority—or even of a considerable monarchist minority—will, of course, be incomprehensible to the average American reader except upon the theory that it is a natural outgrowth of innate depravity. But there are very real reasons for it. In part, and especially so far as the lower classes are concerned, it is the result of dissatisfaction over dearer food, higher rents, excessive taxes, and deprivations in general. Governments are always made the scapegoats in such cases. But there are other and more defensible reasons for the growing defection from the republic among the intelligent classes. The wishy-washy incompetence of the vast majority of the new republican officials plays into the hands of the monarchists. * * * The sanctions along the Rhine and the aggressions of the Poles in Upper Silesia have done incalculably much to unite Germans of all classes. Another reason for the disgust of wide classes of intellectual Germany with the republic is the pork-barrel spoils system prevailing in governmental affairs.

Not only does a monarchist majority exist today, but it will be increased by the coming generation of voters. Despite the efforts of various ministers of education to eliminate from the schools all instruction tending to honor past traditions and history, to root out patriotic sentiments, the school children of Germany are still for the most part using the old textbooks, and the vast majority of the teachers are still monarchist at heart. The situation in the higher institutions of learning is especially unfavorable for the republicans. Elections in the various universities last winter, to choose members of student committees, showed monarchist majorities running up to seven to one; rarely did the republican groups succeed in polling half as many as did the groups that are denounced as "reactionaries." And it is a widespread error which assumes that the German university students are recruited mainly from the upper classes. On the contrary, the great majority are sons and daughters of people of the lower middle class—small tradesmen, civil service employes and the like. The church takes no part in politics, but its influence also is unfavorable to republicanism.

CONQUERING THE AIR.

From the New York World.

ANOTHER world's flying record was won for America by the flight lasting more than 24 hours by Stinson and Bertaud at Mineola. It was a doubly severe test of endurance, both for the men and the plane they used, in view of the weather conditions. How much longer they might have remained in the air if the oil pipe had not burst there is no means of telling. One estimate of the distance that they covered exceeds 2000 miles, sufficient for a transatlantic flight. It should be satisfaction enough that the previous nonstop flight record was surpassed by a very liberal margin. If records are to be smashed it should be by gradual stages, lest future aspirants be discouraged by the odds against them. What has been clearly demonstrated is that with a sound machine it is man's physical endurance in the face of fatigue and nerve strain that must fix the limit of time. Luck, of course, will enter into the test in any circumstances, and luck is the most uncertain gift of the gods of the air. Straight flying, without stunts or tricks, such as Stinson and Bertaud did in their all-day and all-night course, is what counts in the practical development of aviation. When New York and Denver are only a safe day's trip apart we are making progress. It is a safe rule that what one man does by way of an initial performance others in time will repeat until it becomes an everyday affair.

"TIS A LOVELY PLAY ENTIRELY, GLORY BE"

"The Whiteheaded Boy" It Is, With Irish Players From Dublin to Act It.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

GLORY be, it's the grand piece them Irish Players from Dublintown be after showing at the American play-theater the week. An elegant comedy it is, "The White-Headed Boy" is the title; and me brave laddo from Cork, Lennox Robinson's the name, God bless 'um, have the writing of it.

Will ye look on the Widow Geoghegan's house in Ballycolman? It's new horse-hair they've put in the armchair, and aren't the pictures lovely? That's William Geoghegan himself, God rest his soul, over the chimney-piece, and that's his brother that died in Boston hanging between the window and the door. The priest in the plush frame is Father Maguire, no relation but a lovely man.

Yerra, it's Kate that kneels with a toasting fork by the fire; she's up to 36, with a gray streak in her hair, and it isn't likely she'll ever marry; but it's still dreaming she is over her big, powerful, hairy man—twice only she saw him.

The Widow Geoghegan it is that's readying the table, against the return of Denis, her youngest boy, from Dublin. Wisha, she's cracked about Denis! The tall girl coming is Jane; she and Donough Brosnan have been promised to each other these years past. And who is this great lump of a girl? "Baby" it is, and it's a fine idea she has of herself entirely; she would skeet out of this up to Dublin to learn the shorthand, and a grand one she is for the music.

'Tis Aunt Ellen, the Creature!

And here is Donough Brosnan, the little snipeen of a fellow; and Peter Geoghegan, he's not much one way or the other; and George Geoghegan, the oldest boy; forty he was last summer, and it's gray and worried and a bit sour he is—small wonder, with that string of sisters and brothers depending on him, with no chance to marry, or have a bit of fun, or enjoy the spending of his own money.

This so is Aunt Ellen herself, Aunt Ellen Geoghegan, glory to God, the creature! Terrible clever she is, full of notions and schemes, always at the reading, a bit cranky and a nasty twist to her tongue if she liked. She's a woman to be respected, with a couple of hundred acres back there at Kilmurray, and owning them three cottages at the other end of the village.

Here, now, is me bold boy, Denis, back from the college in Dublin. Isn't he lovely, with the clothes and smartness and all and all? How his mother hangs on his neck, no blame to her! She knew he was different from the other children the day he was born. They're all soft on him, in their hearts, the blessing of God on him; though it's three times now he's failed at the examinations, what with lashings of money laid out for his education. It's doctoring at Trinity he's been, learning to be a medical.

A Fright for Crossness.

But see how angry mad is George, the bitter man! It's off to Canada Denis must be, says George; off to Canada, the idle, good-for-nothing young fellow, failing at the examinations, betting on horse races and spending whips of money on the cards and drink. George is right, say Kate, Jane, Baby, Peter and Aunt Ellen. "It's a damned shame!" says me bold Denis, who'll be losing his temper in a minute; and "Denis, darling, I'll never desert you," wails his mother. Isn't George the hard, cruel man? Isn't he the fright for crossness?

There's nothing to do; Denis must be kicked out. But think of the great laughing the peighbors will be having at the Geoghegans, and all the talk they made of his cleverness in the last 20 years! It's ashamed they'd be to be seen on the street for the next twelvemonth.

Oh, faith, it's the elegant notion that comes now to clever Aunt Ellen. Let it be given out that Denis is going to Canada to a grand position, nothing to do but superintending like, strolling about with hands in his pockets, making other people work and putting money in the bank all the time. Send Hannah, the housemaid, with the wagging tongue, to spread the fine news through the village.

But what of Delia Duffy, to whom Denis has promised himself as soon as he gets to be a doctor? George will pay the passage of the two of them to Canada, he says, if they'll marry. "Thank you for nothing," answers Denis, and writes a note giving Delia the great throw-over. He won't ask Delia to rough it with him in Canada. Isn't he his mother's lovely boy?

Old Duffy, the Divil of a Man!

Mother of God, what a knocking at the door! 'Tis old John Duffy himself, the divil of a man, come to see whether his only child is to be trampled on so like dirt. Duffy is one of wealth and power; Postmaster he is, chairman of the Rural District Council, owner of three public houses. How his eyes roll, the frightful old spalpeen! "A Duffy not good enough for a Geoghegan!" shouts he, and Denis going out to Canada to a grand position and all and all. 'Tis Denis will marry Delia, or he puts the matter in the lawyer's hands tomorrow! "One thousand pounds damages!" Oh, my God!

'Tis Aunt Ellen it takes to soothe him. "Do you remember," she wheedles, the clever woman, "the day you walked 12 miles to get a red ribbon I'd set my mind on having for the races?" "I do that," says Duffy, drawing his chair closer, and the upshot is that he says: "Give me a hundred pounds down and promise to marry me before Shrove, and I'll let Denis and the Geoghegans go to the divil."

"You're a hard man," says Aunt Ellen, who's been in love with him all the time; "you always get what you want." See how sweet they're kissing! "Cripes, I'd like to get drunk," roars old John, but first will Aunt Ellen make out a promise to marry him and sign a check for 100 pounds? He's always an eye to business, has John Duffy, crafty that he is.

The Foxy Old Rascal!

Look at George, stealing in, insinuating like. What will John Duffy take to settle the case out of court? Tch! Tch! Old Duffy has Aunt Ellen's check in his pocket. "Five hundred pounds!" says the postmaster, a smart old rogue he is. "Two hundred!" offers George. "Put your hand there!" says me bold Duffy. And if here isn't the Widow Geoghegan, putting a letter in Duffy's hands! He opens it, and how the banknotes come rolling out! "I'll leave it to God and yourself," she whispers to the foxy old villain.

Next morning, when all are gathered, who should appear but Denis and Delia? It's married they've been the last half hour! "It's ruined me you have!" bellows old Duffy, as the Geoghegans demand back their bribes. "Hadn't I my fortune made? Wasn't I settled for life?"

And Denis, that elegant lad, in the name of goodness, will you look at him? 'Tis overalls he has on him, and his trousers tied with string and a muffler round his neck and an old greasy cap. "Delia and I must live," says he. Ballycolman or Canada, it's all the same to him, and he's been after getting himself a job working on the road with the steam-roller. It's only 100 yards from the door of George's shop, and in a day or so the gang will have worked as far as the postoffice.

Comes Round Them Again.

"Oh, my God!" cries old Duffy, almost weeping, and gives Denis Aunt Ellen's check, his mother's 20 pounds and George's note, if only he'll give up that terrible notion. "Denis work!" screams Aunt Ellen, "what a disgrace!" and she promises to leave him her farm, if so he'll throw up the job. Also, he may have the job which was promised to Peter, keeping her Co-operative Store in Kilmurray. "Take it, Denis, take it, for the mother's sake," pleads George. Denis doesn't know anything about keeping a shop.

"I'll keep the shop," says Delia. "There's not one of you here have ever understood Denis. He's been straitened and denied all his life through, but I'm going to give him what he wants now—an easy life, no responsibility, money in his pocket, and something to grumble at."

And so, at the end, 'tis the whiteheaded boy who comes round them all, as he always had and always will. Kate will never get her big, powerful, hairy man; Jane and Donough must wait awhile longer to marry, and "Baby" will go to Dublin—some time. George and Peter will drudge on at the shop. "That's my brave darling boy," weeps the doting mother, as Denis accepts the arrangements. "Oh, Delia, take care of him; he's not strong at all."

Beautifully acted the comedy is, like a real bit of old Ireland, by the Irish players from the Abbey Theater in Dublin—Maureen Delany as Mrs. Geoghegan, Sidney Morgan as George; Harry Hutchinson, Norah Desmond, Suzanne McKernan, Mary Fitzgerald and Arthur Shields as Peter, Kate, Jane, "Baby" and Denis; J. A. O'Rourke as Donough Brosnan, Arthur Sinclair as John Duffy, Gertrude Murphy as Delia, Christine Hayden as Hannah, and Marie O'Neill—God's blessing on her!—as crusty, managing, adroit Aunt Ellen.

"TOL'ABLE DAVID" FILM A SCREEN MASTERPIECE

Betty Compson in "The Little Minister" and Priscilla Dean in "Conflict" Also Fine Attractions.

"Tol'able David," a picture from the story by Joseph Hergesheimer, is at the West End Lyric and New Grand Central Theaters this week. Richard Barthelmess has the title role.

In describing this picture, one tries in vain to avoid superlatives. It is truly magnificent. Virtually perfect in color, form and atmosphere, the story is plausible and dramatic, the characters are drawn with rare artistry, and the action is tremendous. Only one who has lived in the hill country of East Tennessee or Kentucky can appreciate the utter fidelity of the setting; only one who knows the mountain folk can understand how delicate and fine is the character work in this film.

David is the youngest son of a mountaineer. Being the baby of the family is, and has been, the plague and humiliation of his life. He aspires to some day succeed his stalwart brother, Allan, as driver of the hack that carries the Government mail. He knows that he can snare trout and shoot better than any man in the hills. Yet his folks tell him he is not a man yet—"jes' tol'able."

But the time comes when David must be a man. Into the peaceful and neighborly atmosphere of the settlement comes the black sheep branch of the Hatburn family, wholly different in character and habits from the mild cousin in whose home they unceremoniously install themselves. Here are three murderous, leering, lecherous brutes, whose hands are against society and whose villainy is unclouded with a single amending quality.

David's dog is killed, its back cruelly broken with a rail. Allan, the strongest man in the hills, tells the Hatburns that when the mail is delivered he will be back to settle with them. As he turns, a jagged rock strikes him down, and, with callous satisfaction, Luke Hatburn performs that shuddering feat of "giving him the boot." The father of David and Allan sets out to pay the debt of honor and revenge, but he never arrives. There remains only David.

The climax is reached in a way that is an artistic and dramatic triumph. The suspense is agonizing, but never attenuated, and the end comes with crushing finality and force. David pays the score, all right. Battered, shot and broken, this unconquerable wildcat of the hills drinks vengeance to the very dregs. So ingeniously contrived is the story, that he is permitted to do this without breaking the law, and without necessarily being a disciple of feud ethics.

For that matter, this is not the feud story so familiar to the movie patron and fiction reader—and so unfamiliar to those who know the feudists. This story reeks with the flavor of reality, probability. Everything in it could have happened.

Honors in the achievement are divided, but one is persuaded that the first should go to Henry King, the director. Berthelmess is a signal success, but not more so than Walter P. Lewis, as the terrible Luke Hatburn, nor than Glady Hulette, as the convincing heroine, nor than the actress who has the part of David's mother.

"Little Minister" Capably Presented.

The whimsical humor, romantic style and Scottish atmosphere of Sir James M. Barrie's stage classic, "The Little Minister," are transferred to another medium with remarkable fidelity in the photoplay version which is the week's feature at the Missouri Theater. Here Betty Compson adds new laurels to her crown of stardom in the role of "Babbie," while no less notable is the characterization of "Gavin," the little minister. In support of these there is an unusually well selected cast and the settings of the scenes laid in and around the prim little village of Thrums are pictorial gems. Not only is "The Little Minister," as a whole, a great picture, but in its component parts it is a great series of little pictures. If it were not that the plot is Barrie's one could leave the sequence of action out of consideration and find adequate enjoyment from the pictorial perfection of the unfolding scenes.

The story is simple, but of compelling interest. Lady Barbara Rintoul, young, vivacious and venturesome, delights in disguising herself as a gypsy when dispensing charity in the village over which her British father holds official sway. In her goings about she meets the little minister of the village church and tricks him into sounding the signal for a revolt of the weavers against intolerable working conditions. This brings out the British redcoats and there are some stirring "mob scenes." Having tricked the little minister thus far, "Babbie," clad in a borrowed hat and cape to conceal her gypsy raiment, induces him to pass her through the soldiers' lines as his wife. Under the Scottish law this acknowledgment constitutes a legal marriage. On hearing that the minister has scandalized the community by his association with the gypsy, Lord Rintoul insists that the minister's marriage to the gypsy be made legally effective, not knowing that the supposed gypsy is his own daughter. In a rash moment he has promised "Babbie" that if she ever finds him doing anything foolish he will grant the demands of the dissatisfied weavers.

When the revelation of the gypsy's identity is made at a session of officers of the church, Lord Rintoul admits that he has been a very foolish parent. He keeps his promise as to the weavers and Babbie and the little minister find themselves where they all along had wanted to be—in each other's arms.

"Conflict" a Thrilling Melodrama.

Full of action and of more than ordinary dramatic value is "Conflict," with Priscella Dean as the star at the Liberty. The scenes are laid in a north woods lumber camp and the story early develops a most fascinating mystery as to who committed a murder. Martha Mattox, as the hate-ridden housekeeper of the heroine's uncle, gives to this role a wonderful characterization. She holds the secret which keeps the hard-hearted lumber magnate in her power. She knows, or at least leads him to believe she knows that the stain of a murder is on his soul. So long has she brooded with grim thoughts that her mind develops a homicidal tendency. She tries to murder the niece who has been brought to live with the uncle at the lumber camp.

The story works to a thrilling climax in which the heroine rides floating logs down a swift and treacherous stream to rescue the hero who has been hurled into the stream by rival lumbermen. There is a remarkably realistic series of scenes leading up to the rescue.

"Playing With Fire."

Glady's Walton in "Playing With Fire" is the amusing and at times exciting picture on view at the Criterion and Delmar theaters. Miss Walton has but recently graduated from the juvenile class. In this picture she has the role of a piano player in a sheet music store. A fortuitous circumstance gains entry for her in "high society." Concealing her real identity she has highly diverting adventures, including some which are more dangerous than diverting. A plumber rescues her from a villain. After she has agreed to marry the plumber he reveals that he, too, has been masquerading. He is the son of a rich plumbing contractor and has been working to learn the business and fit himself to succeed his father in running it.

LISZT SPIRIT HEARTENED SILOTI DURING CONCERT

Famed Pianist Says Apparition of Former Teacher Appeared to Him Saturday.

While nearly 2000 persons rejoiced in the inspired playing of Alexander Siloti, during the Symphony Orchestra concert Saturday night at the Odeon, no one was aware that beside the Russian pianist stood the benign apparition of Franz Liszt, his teacher, to hearten the soloist at his work. So at least affirmed the distinguished artist to friends, before departing from St. Louis, where he made his first American appearance since 1898.

"Of course, it may have been only a figment of the imagination," said Siloti, who confesses he is not a spiritualist, but declares that if one scoffs at the possibility of the return of the dead, one must also be ready to maintain that men like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle and Sir Oliver Lodge are mad.

Siloti's first number was Liszt's transcription, for pianoforte and orchestra, of Schubert's Fantasie in C Major, known as "The Wanderer." He related that at the beginning of the work he was in difficulty and that immediately the specter, or simulacrum, of Liszt appeared before him with encouraging smiles and gestures, whefeupon his playing gained ease and confidence to a remarkable degree.

The program had a marked Lisztian atmosphere, for, in addition to the "Wanderer" Fantasie, the orchestra performed the Hungarian master's Symphonic Poem, No. 3, "Les Preludes," after a passage in Lamartine beginning: "What is our life but a series of preludes, to that unknown song, the first solemn note of which is sounded by death?"

This is not the first time that Siloti has been on spectral or at least imaginative terms with his great teacher and friend, who died in 1886. He relates that after the Bolshevik revolution he was in such dire financial straits that he was forced to earn his bread, though a European celebrity, by playing the piano in a cinema palace.

During those days his mind ran on his need of money and upon his memories of Liszt. He escaped to England, and there encountered friends who were accustomed to holding seances, and who declared that Liszt's wraith had frequently manifested itself, speaking often of Siloti, grieving over his misfortunes and predicting that in time all would come out right.

With deep emotion, Siloti related that on the night of Liszt's death, at Bayreuth, an image or dream of the master appeared to him, hundreds of miles away, and said: "I have come to tell you that my last earthly thought was of you."

Siloti wept, with a choking in his throat, and murmured, "Ah, master!" To which the vision replied, before vanishing:

"Do not grieve; my death was peaceful and happy."

"EAST IS WEST," IF FAY BAINTER SAYS SO

Charm of Star Glosses Over Situations Which Tax Credulity Heavily.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

FAY BAINTER, tripping and chirping through "East Is West," makes one ready to accept the paradox of the play's title, or to agree complacently that today is tomorrow, or that Mr. Billy Benson is a Hottentot, or that Charlie Yong is the late Sitting Bull—whom he resembles somewhat—or that Ming Toy, Chinese sing-song girl, is really a Spanish senorita or a Hawaiian princess, or an American missionary's daughter, whichever the audience may be asked, in the last few minutes of the play, to believe that she is.

A good sized audience, at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater last night, enjoyed and applauded the pretty acting of the character of Ming Toy, which is Miss Bainter's work, and appeared not greatly disturbed by the curious phases of the play, which is the work of Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer.

With a less expensive setting and a less accomplished star, this play would belong in the classification of popular-price melodrama. But as popular-price melodrama is almost extinct, this plot, with its heavy tax upon credulity, would be less glaringly unplausible in a musical setting. The only music in "East Is West" is a ballad sung by Ming Toy, who has first tuned up her lyre with a few bars of "Doodle Yank," learned in mission school.

On the Love-Boat.

In the opening act, called the prologue, the open door of China is opened far enough to let us see the sale of girls by their parents, who have been able to dress them up surprisingly well, considering the poverty which is the excuse for this traffic. Billy Benson, son of the American Minister to China, visits the love-boat, with Lo Sang Kee, San Francisco Chinese merchant, and when he sees Ming Toy about to be sold to a repulsive customer, he persuades Lo to buy the girl and take her to San Francisco.

Lo's home is next shown, with a gilded Joss in the position of honor. Ming Toy makes it known that she has no confidence in Joss, probably having known too many of his devotees in China. Certainly the conduct of Lo Sang Kee, who maintains a fatherly attitude toward the pretty young girl in his keeping, is a credit to this particular Joss. Lo is such a strict foster-parent that he is horrified when Ming Toy winks from his window at passing youths, who, she explains, have first winked at her, thus requiring a similar courtesy in return.

At this point there appears quite the most unconvincing missionary ever turned loose upon our alien population. He represents "the Mission," which is strong enough to compel Lo Sang Kee to turn Ming Toy out of his home, but which is afraid of offending Charlie Yong, the chop suey king, who claims the girl. Billy Benson, back from China, comes in answer to Ming Toy's fervent prayers to the "nice Clistian God," and aided at length by the missionary, who is about to become engaged to Billy's sister, Billy takes the girl to the Benson home. When there is a suggestion of the real cause for Billy's interest in Ming Toy, the missionary offers a preachment about "racial determinism, as relentless as the laws of the universe."

Cherries and Tar Soap.

The butler in the Benson home does not know whether Ming Toy is a servant or a guest, but she understands her position quite clearly, and regales herself with cherries from the household cocktails, and with her chosen perfume—tar soap. Charlie Yong still pursues Ming Toy, and does not hesitate to invade the home of so distinguished a citizen as the former diplomat, there being, apparently, no police in the Nob Hill district of San Francisco.

Ming Toy's supposed father is in the gang which Charlie Yong brings to abduct the girl, and his presence brings about the revelation which makes it happily certain that Ming Toy will be Billy's bride, and regretfully likely that she will soon be exchanging her becoming silk pantalets for American gowns. This prospect is not exactly appalling to those who saw Miss Bainter in Occidental garb in "The Willow Tree," a few seasons ago. This is her fourth season in "East Is West," which ran two seasons in New York.

Ralph Locke as Charlie Yong, Robert Harrison as the upright Lo Sang Kee, and Frederick Howard as Billy Benson, are the chief supporting players. The love-boat scene, with a handsome scenic setting, introduced briefly some characters like those appearing in "Chu Chin Chow." Of sundry amusing lines, the audience most enjoyed Ming Toy's order to the butler to eject "that Chink," meaning Charlie Yong, from the Benson home.

G. O. P. Secretary Much Improved.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 9.—The condition of Clarence B. Miller, secretary of the Republican National Committee, who was operated on last Monday for appendicitis, is much improved. Providing unlooked-for complications do not set in, his recovery will be rapid, his physicians said. Miller's condition had been reported critical.

Robbers Take Charge of Building.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Five armed men, who last night posed as policemen, took control of the Great Lakes Building, imprisoned four men they found in the building and looted the storerooms of the A. Aren Drug Co., in the downtown section, of 40 cases of whisky, are today still at liberty. The bandits roamed the building for more than an hour and hauled out the liquor, which was valued at $4000, on a freight elevator. One of the robbers released the prisoners before he departed on a truck.

Enterprise Flour is reliable

It's milled from sound wheat

IT takes fine flour to produce fine baking—and fine flour must be milled from fine wheat. But sound wheat is scarce this year.

An untimely spring freeze weakened the crop. Frequent showers in the late harvest kept it from drying in the shock. Stored damp, much of it is weevily and musty.

A little—about one carload in a hundred—is good enough to make Enterprise. And that is the wheat we buy. It costs much more than the run of the crop, but it's worth every cent it costs.

Only sound strong gluten wheat will give Enterprise the high quality that enables it to produce such fine, even-textured baking. Only sound strong gluten wheat will make Enterprise so reliable that it never causes a failure.

Your grocer carries Enterprise—ask him to send you a sack. It costs much less than it did last year tho it still costs more than ordinary flour. When you use it remember this—eight or even less cups of Enterprise go as far as nine of ordinary flour.

WEDDING CALLED OFF AT MINISTER'S HOME

While Pastor Was Dressing for Ceremony Girl Decided She Was Not Ready to Marry.

The intended marriage of J. Ralph Hutchinson, Prosecuting Attorney of Pemiscot County, to Miss Joyce Huffman, 20 years old, of Caruthersville, Mo., for whom a marriage license was issued at Caruthersville, Dec. 10, was indefinitely postponed after the couple had called at the home of a minister in St. Louis at 10:30 o'clock Saturday night to have the ceremony performed, and the young woman announced that she was not ready to be married.

Miss Huffman, who is a member of a wealthy Pemiscot County family, is visiting at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Edward J. Mack Jr., 4011 Lafayette avenue. She attended the Colonial School in Washington, D. C., being graduated there last spring.

Hutchinson, who is 27 years old, is a graduate of St. Louis University Law School. He was elected Prosecuting Attorney of Pemiscot County at the last general election. It had been known in Caruthersville for some time that the couple expected to be married.

Hutchinson came to St. Louis last Saturday and Miss Huffman had been here about a week, having come here from Washington. A Post-Dispatch reporter learned that the Rev. William Edward Brown, pastor of the Shaw Avenue Methodist Church, had been asked to perform the ceremony.

The Rev. Mr. Brown, when asked about the circumstances by a Post-Dispatch reporter, said that the couple called at his home, 4272A Russell avenue, about 10:30 Saturday night. They were accompanied by another couple. They made known their intention to be married and he asked them to wait while he dressed. When he was ready to perform the ceremony Miss Huffman announced that she was not ready to be married and the party departed, without giving him any reason for their change in plans.

It was learned today that Hutchinson returned last night to Caruthersville. Miss Huffman is still at the home of her aunt. She declined to discuss the reason for her decision not to be married Saturday night, but said that the marriage was merely postponed.

$25,000 FOR PALESTINE FUND RAISED AT DINNER

Subscriptions Pledged at Entertainment of Prof. Warburg and Other Delegates.

At a dinner last night at the Planters Hotel in honor of Prof. Otto Warburg of Berlin University, Germany; Col. John H. Patterson of the British Army and Vladimir Jabotinski, representing the Jews of Palestine, delegates representing the Palestine Foundation Fund, subscriptions of about $25,000 were received. The delegates are spending three days here in aid of the campaign to raise the city's $200,000 quota of the $11,000,000 budget that is being raised for the rehabilitation of Palestine as a refuge for homeless jews.

Prof. Warburg, in his address, said the purpose of the movement was simply to try to make Palestine a real Jewish home. The land, while small, was large enough to support many millions. He believed that Palestine could be made into a sort of Paradise for the Jews, where they could live independently.

Jabotinski, answering objections to the "Back to Palestine" movement, said Palestine had many products of value, including superior oranges and grapes. He declared that every inch of Palestine could be made productive, and that, lying at the point where Asia, Africa and Europe unite and cross each other, it should be the richest country on the earth. He refuted the objection that the Jews are not colonizers by referring to successful colonization accomplished under great difficulties.

The Rev. Z. B. T. Phillips, of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, spoke in favor of the movement. Behind all the efforts to rehabilitate Palestine, he said, must be the great desire to see the old Biblical prophecies fulfilled with the return of the Jews to Palestine.

CHANGE OF VENUE MOVES USURY TRIAL TO ST. CHARLES

John H. Vette Faces Four and Frank Alewell Three Charges of Illegal Interest Rates.

A change of venue from the Court of Criminal Correction to St. Charles, Mo., was granted this morning by Judge Miller to John H. Vette and Frank Alewell of 2900 Market street, who were charged with usury in three joint informations issued at the instigation of the Legal Aid Bureau. Prosecuting Attorney Oakley consented to the change on the plea by Thomas B. Harvey, attorney for the men, that prejudice existed against his clients here.

The cases in question arose after several persons, who had obtained chattel mortgage loans on their furniture from the office conducted by Vette, had asked for legal advice about the interest they paid. Besides the three informations in which the men are named jointly, a fourth was issued against Vette alone. Date for the St. Charles trial has not been set.

Angelica Club to Ignore Order to Take Out License

Wilson-Noye Boxing Bout Will Be Held, However, Club President Asserts.

POLICE HEAD NOTIFIED

City Commission Asks Chief O'Brien to See That His Men Enforce the Law.

By John E. Wray.

Members of the City Boxing Commission met at the city hall this morning, in the first official meeting of the body since it effected organization last week, under an ordinance passed by the Board of Aldermen last December.

Victor J. Miller, president of the Police Board, who appointed the unofficial Boxing Committee that has been straightening out the affairs of local boxing promoters for six months with considerable success, had been invited to attend the new city commission session, but did not accept the invitation. The new commission had hoped through Miller, to straighten out the tangle threatened by the existence of two boxing boards, one authorized by city ordinance, the other appointed by the Police Board, which derives its authority from the Governor.

The members of the new city commission present were: Maj. Horace S. Rumsey, chairman; Henry Kraleman, chairman of the Public Safety Committee of the Board of Aldermen, an ex-officio member of the boxing commission; Robert A. Newman, secretary of the commission; E. E. Butler of the Republican City Central Committee and treasurer of the boxing board; Dr. Ignatius W. Powell and C. Drummond Jones, vice-president of the Busch-Diesel Engine Co.

Law in Force Now.

The commission, in a brief session, agreed on a form for licenses to be available for clubs, boxers, referees and seconds, all of whom must take out permits under the city ordinance. It was announced that the license collector was prepared to issue licenses immediately to all connected with the game who might apply. This was done to make it possible for all those connected with tomorrow night's boxing bouts at the Coliseum to comply with the law.

The commission drafted a letter to Martin J. O'Brien, calling upon him to enforce the law in case the Angelica Club, which is promoting tomorrow night's entertainment, and the fighters, officials, etc., connected with the same, fail to comply with the license provisions of the law. If the club, the boxers, etc., are duly licensed, no police intervention will be necessary.

The meeting, after half an hour's session, adjourned to meet again shortly.

Club Will Not Take Out License.

Leo Heyman, president of the Angelica Club, told the Post-Dispatch at noon today that he had been notified of the new boxing board's action, in a letter, but said that he had decided to go ahead with plans to hold the show, under authorization of the Police Board Committee, which requires no licenses.

"We do not want to stir up strife," Heyman said, "but we have laid our plans and have been allotted dates by the old commission. We will go ahead under their authority and hold the show as scheduled. We hope that the police will not interfere. In fact I myself feel sure that the show will go forward as scheduled, protected by the Police Board boxing commission. At the worst, we will be able to make a test of the new law, which, I am told, is not valid."

Redcap Wilson Here.

"Redcap" Wilson has arrived. This "goes double," for not only has the Italian lightweight "arrived" in the sense of making good in the ring, but he is here on the battleground, ready for his bout at the Coliseum Tuesday with Johnny Noye of St. Paul.

Wilson is substituting for Andy Chaney, featherweight title candidate, whose manager last Saturday called off his engagement to meet Noye. Wilson, who is also managed by Eddie Mead, was recommended to take Chaney's place. Reports were that Chaney was so badly used up in beating "Babe" Herman at Madison Square Garden, last Friday, that it was considered unwise to send him against a determined, hard-hitting boxer of Noye's type. However, Scotty Monteith, a partner of Mead's in the management of a stable of boxers, today exhibited a certificate from a New York physician which showed that Chaney was suffering from traumatic pleurisy. A traumatic illness is one resulting from a wound.

Wilson is an Italian by birth, real name Giovanni Terranova; he is about 21 years of age. His nickname, "Redcap," was derived from his custom of entering the ring wearing a red skull cap. Draws with Sammy Sieger and Harvey Bright, victories over Willie Beecher, Freddie Jacks, Dutch Brandt and others, and knockouts of Johnny Murray and of Solly Greene, Canadian champion, are among his best efforts.

Leonard vs. Britton.

Private Benny Leonard vs. Corp. Jack Britton, for the welterweight championship of the world, may be a New York announcement soon. According to Fred Winsor, here with Boxer Al Walker. Winsor says one of the New York Armory Athletic Associations is planning to hold the championship and will first enlist the two scrappers in the New York National Guard, in order to make the bout eligible to be held in an armory. Friction between Tex Rickard and Leonard's manager thus far has prevented the arrangement of this fight to take place at Madison Square Garden. Both boxers are willing.

Britton in Title Go.

Britton, who is nearing the 37-year-old mark, will first defend his honors against Dave Shade of San Francisco, at Madison Square Garden, Jan. 31. Shade is one of three brothers who have been making good.

Britton, like Bob Fitzsimmons, won his title at the age of 35; like Fitz, he may lose it at 37, especially is he decides to oppose Leonard.

Professional Football Lacks Spark That Makes the College Player Fight to the Last Inch

Roper Says Tremendous Outcry Against Paid Elevens Is Not Warranted by the Situation—Believes Game Will Never Develop as Spectacle.

By W. W. (Bill) Roper.
Head Princeton Coach.
(Copyright, 1922.)

THERE seems to be just now a tremendous outcry against professional football. In fact, the opponents of this side of the game seem a trifle more bitter than the situation warrants.

I am in no sense an advocate of the professional end of the game. In fact, I have no interest in it. I haven't seen a professional football game for more than 20 years, nor so far as I know have I ever coached a man who has subsequently played on a professional team or ever wanted to, and I have coached eight Princeton teams since I left college.

But I recognize there are people who enjoy watching a professional game and I imagine there are those who like to play in one. And I am not sure the best results can be accomplished by completely ostracizing them.

Twenty-five years of football, as player, fan and coach—and I am not sure which description fits me best—have taught me first of all that the game is played not by eleven men, but by 1100 or 11,000—by the whole student and graduate body of the institution, large or small, which those 11 men represent. This may sound like the loose and windy bombast of the all too common collegiate spellbinder, but my experience has convinced me that it is very sober fact, and I believe that because of this, the attempts to introduce the game as a professionally played spectacle will be sporadic at best.

Pro-Football Can't Thrive.

In my opinion, these attempts will fail—fail not only as regards the game itself, but as attractions to the sport-loving part of the public. Regardless of their quality of football, they would certainly continue if they paid in dollars and cents. I believe the interest in purely professional football may flourish for a while, but that it will gradually die out. This is what has happened in the past, and I am confident history will repeat itself.

Your professional teams and players have everything that any college teams or players have, and indeed, some professional aggregations have a distinct advantage in the individual brilliance of their men and the fact that each of these men has behind him his own following of personal admirers who transfer their allegiance to any team on which he plays.

A first-class professional eleven is always composed of former college stars, each far better advertised before he begins his professional career than any professional baseball player can hope to be, and each of these men has, too, a certain box-office value, based on his college connections, individually, at least, the professionals are certainly superior in ability to college players. Few colleges can hope to put on the field an eleven composed entirely of individual stars, which is the natural beginning of any professional team.

If anything, the advantage, therefore, ought to lie with the professional and yet I am told by those closely and technically interested in every minor move on the field, that professional football is duller to watch, that it is actually poorer football, play for play, than one may see between even second-rate college teams. The old game, with its imperative demand for courage and heart, and the new game, with no less demand for these, and the added requisite of lightning intelligence, fail alike when the men are playing for pay instead of for something less tangible but more compelling.

The one thing which the professional team lacks, and which the college or school team has, is the spirit which stands behind the institutional eleven and does not and cannot get behind a mere collection of hired gladiators. Player and spectator alike feel and show the lack of it and so long as the rules stand, roughly as they are, just so long will promoters of professional football lose their money in the end.

Thirty-odd thousand persons braved pneumonia and sat in a drenching rain through the Penn-Cornell football game at Franklin Field, while hardly a third of that number watched the Canton and All-Star Philadelphia teams play at the ball grounds in the same city a few weeks later. And it wasn't on a rainy day either. I believe the Philadelphia Stars could have defeated the University of Pennsylvania with six men and yet three times as many persons paid more for the privilege of seeing the college game.

Therein lies both the reasons why professional football inevitably fails and the proof that the successful coach must teach football to his college or his school as well as to his team, if he hopes to get the best out of his players on the field. In almost every institution, the spirit exists as a permanent thing and needs little or no creative effort on the part of the coach, but nearly always it does need intelligent stimulation and guidance to produce its best effects on the players and their play.

This is the real difference between professional football and the college game. There is in the play of the professional team a clearly perceptible defect which I can only describe as listlessness, although it is something less tangible than that, a failure to give the last ounce, to fight for the last inch, which was and is still a great essential necessity in real football.

COATS SOCCER ELEVEN BEATS CHAMPION TODDS IN LEAGUE GAME, 1 TO 0

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Playing a gilt edged brand of soccer, the J. & P. Coats football club of Pawtucket, R. I., won a close game from the national champions of Todd Shipyards by the score of 1 goal to 0 in the American Soccer League series at Todd Field in Brooklyn yesterday. The New Englanders played a fast, aggressive game and merited the victory. The single tally came after 20 minutes of play, when Shepherd landed a hard drive from the wing in the home net.

The advantage was held throughout the remainder of the match, thanks to brilliant work on the part of the visiting defense. The champions made a determined rally at the close and forced no less than five corners in th elast 5 minutes of play. The field was slippery and there were frequent tumbles.

New York Holds Second Place.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Gaining one additional point through a tie with the Harrison eleven on the latter's home grounds at Harrison, N. J., the New York football club maintained its hold on second place in the American Soccer League yesterday. The score was 1—1, both goals being shot in the first half. But for a penalty given against it as ends were about to be changed, the New York team might have added two points to its total instead of only one.

MISSOURI U. WILL HOLD SCHOOL BASKETBALL TOURNEY MARCH 10-11

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Jan. 9.—The annual interscholastic basketball tourney, to which teams of all high schools accredited to the University of Missouri are invited, will be held here Friday and Saturday, March 10 and 11, it was announced today.

The tourney will probably be conducted on about the same scheme as last year, with divisions composed of large schools and small schools, and a final game between the winners of the two divisions for the State championship.

BIG TEN BASKETBALL TEAMS MEET TONIGHT

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Four Western conference basketball teams were scheduled to meet tonight, Wisconsin playing Northwestern at Evanston, and Ohio appearing against Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Northwestern is certain to encounter much opposition in the Badgers, as the Wisconsin quintet defeated Iowa at Iowa City Saturday night, 18 to 15, when Northwestern was losing to Minnesota, 28 to 13. Ohio, downed by Chicago, will tackle Michigan in the first conference game of the season for the Ann Arbor collegians.

AMERICANS WIN TENNIS TOURNAMENT AT CANNES

CANNES, France, Jan. 9.—Samuel Hardy, member of the American Davis Cup team, defeated C. F. Aeschliman yesterday and won the men's singles championships in the Beau Site tennis tournament. American players were all around winners in the tournament, Miss Elizabeth Ryan taking the women's singles yesterday as well as being on the winning team in the mixed doubles, and Mr. Hardy, paired with Wallace Myers of England, carrying off the men's doubles.

Jewtraw Wins Ice Title.

By the Associated Press.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Jan. 9.—Charles Jewtraw of Lake Placid, national amateur champion, won the New York State ice skating championship at Ideal Park rink, Endicott, yesterday afternoon, from a field of the fastest skaters in the country. He tallied 90 points. Joe Moore of New York, international title holder, finished second, with 80 points, a foul in the 220-yard dash costing him the championship.

Glen Echo Club Awarded Women's Title Tournament

Western Golf Assosiation Championship to Be Decided on St. Louis Course.

A telegram to the Post-Dispatch from Mrs. James A. Corbett of St. Louis, received at 1:30 p. m. today, announced that the Glen Echo Country Club of St. Louis had been awarded the 1922 Western golf championship for women, to be played Aug. 28.

Mrs. Corbett's telegram reads as follows:

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Women's Western Golf Association, held in Chicago today, the Glen Echo Country Club received a unanimous vote as the place for holding the women's Western championship, date Aug. 28. MRS. J. S. CORBETT.

The news came as a complete surprise to most St. Louisans as no announcement had been made that Mrs Corbett and the other members of the St. Louis delegation were making a special effort to obtain the honor.

This is the first time in the history of St. Louis that the event has come to this city. Glen Echo, one of the oldest courses in the city, has been improved in the past year and is now one of the most attractive courses in the city. It was promoted by the late Col. George S. McGraw nearly 20 years ago.

SPORT SALAD

By L. C. Daus

ENOUGH IS SUFFICIENT.

WHILE many cities can afford
The Luxury of a Boxing Board,
We take it there are very few
That can rejoice in having two.

A Boxing Board will now and then
Be relished by the best of men;
But one should be sufficient, quite,
To regulate most any fight.

However, if both boards agree,
An easy job it ought to be
To regulate the boxing shows
And keep the fighters on their toes.

DOUGHBOYS.

PRESIDENT BAKER denies that Lee Meadows will be a Giant. However, whenever Baker needs the dough he knows where to get it.

Harry Frazee says that his object in selling and trading his star players was to strengthen the team. Indicating that Harry is banking on his "iron men" to turn the trick.

Some people would rather have 100,000 iron men batting 6 per cent than one .300 hitter.

The artist who designed the new "peace" dollar stuck his initials on it. However, as you can't read it with the naked eye it doesn't mean anything.

However, there is no difference in the purchasing power. You can buy 50 cents worth of candy with the new dollar same as the old one.

TRADE WINDS.

THE trade wind doth blow
And rookies will go
To some other club in the spring.
But while they're away
The chances are they
Will all be attached to a string.

Jack Dempsey says he would like to fight twice a week. Fair enough. That would leave him five days to count his money.

However, as it takes two to make a fight and as Jack is unmarried we fear his ambition will remain unfulfilled.

But in some cases it takes three to make a fight. Dempsey says he is willing to fight Harry Wills and Wills is yearning to get a crack at Jack, but there can be nothing doing without the consent of Jack Kearns.

If it weren't for the managers some fighters would be fighting all the time.

For be it known that the principal duty of a manager is to keep his man from fighting.

See where $54,000,000 were bet in Maryland pari-mutuel machines in 1921. Indicating that the shortage of money has been greatly exaggerated.

"Yankees Call for Bids on Stadium."—Headline. What's the matter with the stadium at Fenway Park, Boston, Mass.? They've got everything Boston had to offer but that.

De Andreis Eleven Retains Its Lead In Soccer League

Weakness of Ben Miller Backfield Gives Leaders an Easy Victory, 5 to 2.

SCULLINS TRIUMPH, 2—1

Steel Workers Hold Second Place Margin by Defeating Screw Co. Team.

The De Andreis eleven retained its lead in the St. Louis Soccer League by defeating the Ben Millers, one-time national champions, 5 to 2, in the second game of the double-header at High School Field yesterday. The Scullins increased their second place lead over the Screw Co. to four points, trimming McCarthy's aggregation 2 to 1. A crowd estimated at 3000 was present.

The weakness of the Ben Miller backfield, which has been in evidence all season, stood out prominently yesterday. At least three of the goals for the De Andreis can be traced directly to the poor play of Sutter between the uprights. Then Shea and Slattery, who started at fullback, did not break up the De Andreis forward's passing as might be expected. Billy Quinn and "Buck" Redden, halfbacks, also took a whirl at the fullback job. At the end of the first half Foley's green and white athletes were ahead, 4 to 1.

While the poor work of the Miller baskfield aided the De Andreis, it is nevertheless true that the green-jerseyed forward line put up one of the greatest passing games seen in a local game in some time. Better backs than Shea and Slattery would have had trouble stopping them yesterday.

Score After Five Minutes.

For the first five minutes of the fray, the Millers had the ball. Then Jimmy McCaffery, center forward of the De Andreis, gained possession of the sphere and it resulted in the first goal for the leaders. McCaffery passed to Kehrman, who, standing only five feet out, sent it into the net. Immediately after the kickoff, the passing of the De Andreis was again in evidence and Ballam tallied another point.

Here Quinn replaced Slattery at fullback, and the rush of the De Andreis was halted. The Millers took the ball, and after five minutes Al McHenry tallied, putting Ratican's men only one goal behind. But the De Andreis were not through. A few minutes later, Sutter was vainly trying to stop a shot from Fitzgerald, while shortly before the half closed Ballam scored his second point for the De Andreis.

Several changes were made in the Miller lineup at the start of the second half, the most notable being that which sent Redden to fullback in place of Shea. After 15 minutes, a cross from Donovan to McCaffery gave the De Andreis thefr fifth point. Jimmy Dunn scored for the Millers with a shot from the penalty line.

Scullins Triumph, 2 to 1.

The opening game was far closer, but not one bit more exciting than the closing affair. A pass from Cliff Brady to Dike Brannigan enabled the Scullins to tally the first goal. Corrigan scored for the Screw Co. after taking a pass from Wimer, who had carried the ball half the length of the field.

The winning goal for the Scullins came immediately after a free kick, following a foul which cost the Screw Co. a goal. Wimer had tallied, but McSweeney blew his whistle for a foul. After the kick, which was trapped by Schwartz, the center forward passed to Cliff Brady, who banged the ball into the net.

Next Sunday the De Andreis play the Scullins, while the Screw Co. tackles the Ben Millers.

The league standings at present show the De Andreis with 17 points, the Scullins with 15, Screw Co. with 11 and the Ben Millers 9.

Cheaper Golf.

I AM for cheaper golf.

I believe in signs—and it's a good sign to see the price of golf balls coming down. Perhaps we are on the way to good old days when a good club could be bought for a dollar. My first club cost me 95 cents, and it not only looked good to me for years, but it surely laid a good, firm foundation for a lot of golf. I have it yet, though I treasure it so that I never use it. It was "shined and polished" so many times that its edges became almost knife-sharp. It won my first championship, and try as I will I never can make myself feel quite the confidence, with any other mashie, that I learned to feel when playing my original sharpshooter.

I want to see golf continue with rapid strides in its tendency to become cheaper. The popularity of the game has spread so greatly that we have beheld an almost amazing growth and this should be encouraged in every possible way. Golf answers the special need of the business man. More and more each year he seems to realize it.

Public Courses Needed.

One great objective we should strive for now is to make the game more accessible to boys and girls. Most of the good players we now have came up to their skill through beginnings as caddie boys. The public links is the answer in this instance—let's have them everywhere, and then more of them. Last summer the motorman on a car on which I have occasion to ride now and then had his bag of clubs propped in back of his operating mechanism on the car. That's a good sign. Let golf be democratic, our national game!

If I could figure out the balance sheet of golf in America it would make, I am sure, the most astonishing array of figures ever turned up in the sporting world.

One of the leading sports editors of the country asked me to give him such figures, but how can they be arrived at? Try to find out who plays golf today and you discover that nearly everybody is interested in it. It is popular, too, in every grade of life.

Growth in Popularity.

And such popularity! Was ever another sport equal to it? Here's one of the Lincoln Park Golf Commissioners, Chicago, who in his enthusiasm told me the other day that there should be golf holes all the way along Lake Michigan, so a fellow could play himself down to work in the morning, and back home again at night. He mentioned, when I tried to get some golf statistics from him, that all the holes in America strung out would reach around the world. "What a course to play on!" he exclaimed. "Just the right distance, too!"

I think that this year will see more new courses added than ever before. There is a better understanding how to build them now. Financing of new clubs has also been made easier. Undoubtedly great sums of money will be invested in the national sport, but the money will be well spent because of its abundant yield of health and enjoyment.

And the best thing of all, perhaps, is the astonishing way in which golf is catching hold in the smaller towns, in places, I mean, of 5000 people or less. A few more years of this and we shall behold the capitulation of America to golf, the royal, ancient and honorable pastime—the sport supreme.

So let's make it less costly and more popular by every effort we can put forth to that end.

The Washington University basketball team is scheduled to play its second Missouri Valley Conference game of the season tonight, when Missouri University is battled on the Columbia court. In the first game of the season the Pikers lost to Nebraska, 31—23, while the Tigers' first tilt resulted in a victory over Drake.

In the contest with the Cornhuskers, the Pikers made a better showing than was expected. Nebraska is one of the favorites to land the valley title and was expected to romp over the Pikers for an easy victory.

The probable lineup in the Piker-Tiger game follows:

Missouri.	Position.	Washington.
Browning	Forward	Thompson (C)
Vanice	Forward	Linnemeyer
Bunker	Center	Cristel
Bond (C)	Guard	Thumser
Hays	Guard	Leffler

Referee—E. C. Quickley, St. Marys.

Another valley game is scheduled to be decided tonight at Ames, Ia., when the Iowa State quintet tackles Nebraska.

The valley quintets will be busy every night this week with the exception of Thursday. The complete schedule for the week is as follows:

Monday—Washington vs. Missouri at Columbia; Iowa State vs. Nebraska at Ames.

Tuesday—Drake vs. Kansas at Lawrence.

Wednesday—Drake vs. Oklahoma at Norman.

Friday—Grinnell vs. Drake at Des Moines; Missouri vs. Nebraska at Lincoln.

Saturday—Grinnell vs. Nebraska at Lincoln; Washington vs. Kansas Aggies at Manhattan; Iowa State vs. Oklahoma at Norman.

The standings of the Missouri Valley teams after the first week of play in the league race follow:

TEAM.	Won.	Lost.	Pct.

Missouri	1	0	1.000
Oklahoma	1	0	1.000
Kansas	1	0	1.000

Soldan to Play Yeatman.

Soldan, last season's champion in the Interscholastic League, will get a chance to gain its first victory of the present campaign when the Yeatman High School five is tackled, in what should prove the feature game of the double-header on the Cleveland court next Saturday. In the other tilt, Cleveland is scheduled to oppose McKinley. Cleveland is expected to win and thereby gain a tie for first place with Central.

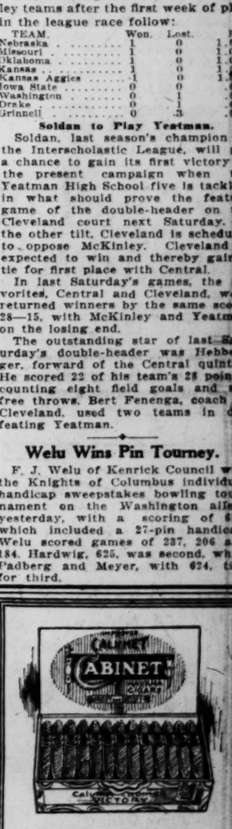

In last Saturday's games, the favorites, Central and Cleveland, were returned winners by the same score, 28—15, with McKinley and Yeatman on the losing end.

The outstanding star of last Saturday's double-header was Hebberger, forward of the Central quintet. He scored 22 of his team's 28 points, counting eight field goals and six free throws. Bert Fenenga, coach of Cleveland, used two teams in defeating Yeatman.

Welu Wins Pin Tourney.

F. J. Welu of Kenrick Council won the Knights of Columbus individual handicap sweepstakes bowling tournament on the Washington alleys yesterday, with a scoring of 654, which included a 27-pin handicap. Welu scored games of 237, 206 and 184. Hardwig, 625, was second, while Padberg and Meyer, with 624, tied for third.

HUGE TREES TRANSPLANTED

Elm trees, averaging 50 feet in height and weighing from 7 to 8 tons apiece, are being transplanted in the Missouri Botanical Garden by the use of an elaborate system of blocks and tackles and a special conveyance. The trees are being moved from a spot adjacent to the garden to a point in the southern portion of the garden where there is dearth of shade in summer.

A trench about 12 feet in circumference is dug about the trunk at its base and when the tree is lifted out from the ground, it carries with it a ball of earth resembling in shape three parts of a sphere. One English and two Scotch elms have been transplanted.

GOLFERS BREAK ICE TO SAVE DROWNING BOY

Donald Mana, 9, Rescued From Lagoon in Forest Park by Three Spectators.

Donald Mana, 9 years old, of 3635 Washington boulevard, was saved from drowning in the Forest Park lagoon yesterday afternoon by three golfers who waded and swam 75 yards from shore into five feet of water covered with a thin sheet of ice. The lad was taken to his home after treatment at a hospital for exposure, and the rescuers were unharmed by their icy plunge.

The boy was attempting to recover several golf balls which had shot out on the ice of Grand Basin, at the foot of Art Hill. He fell through the ice before he had gone far. His cries attracted a number of automobile drivers and golfers.

James B. Curran and his son-in-law, Norman Sutherland, of 1385 Clara avenue, and Cyrus D. Tuttle of 377 North Taylor avenue, were about to drive from No. 18 tee, a little way off, when they saw what had happened. They ran to the basin and broke through the ice at once, because of their weight. They had to spring into the air and break the ice with their elbows thereafter to make progress, but were able to swim a little as they neared the boy, whose struggles were lessening.

He was keeping his head above water by gripping the broken edge of ice. He was wrapped in blankets and taken to the Children's Hospital by an automobile driver.

$1,000,000 Collected for Palestine.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 9.—Rehabilitation of Palestine is taking place, Dr. Nahum Sokolow, president of the World Zionist organization, told an audience of representative Jews from Northern Ohio here last night. Peter Schweitzer, treasurer of the organization, declared that during the last six months $1,000,000 of the $4,000,000 pledged in America for the movement, has been collected.

THE HEIRESS

Maggie Maloney has received a legacy of $25,000 from the widow of Mark Hanna.

Maggie is famous in history as the cook who brought corned beef hash to perfection.

As David Graham Phillips puts it, Maggie influenced legislation by her hash—

A statement best appreciated by those who have enjoyed the delicious corned beef hash served at CHILDS.

Temptingly browned in the pan and topped with a frankly poached egg.

EXCHANGE MARKET AND LOWER MONEY RATES MARK DAY

Call Money Down to 3 Per Cent, Cheapest Since November, 1919 — Foreign Exchange Quotations Reflect Pending Conferences.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"Trading in stocks was dull today with professional influences in the ascendency. Another cut in the price of Pennsylvania crude oil encouraged short selling among the oil stocks and rails were generally heavy as the result of continued weakness in Chicago and Northwestern and active selling of the Erie issues. The latter showed losses of about 2½ points, the common going as low as 7. Taken as a whole, industrials were irregularly lower.

"The real feature of our domestic markets was, however, a further lowering in money rates. Call money on the Stock Exchange opened at 4 per cent, the lowest opening since September, 1914, soon fell to 3½ per cent, and at the start of the last hour was reduced to 3 per cent. This is the cheapest call money on the exchange since November, 1919. Bankers' acceptances eligible to rediscount at the Federal Reserve Bank meanwhile declined to 4 per cent as compared with 4¼ on Saturday and time money was in supply at 4¾ per cent. Expectations of easier money after the turn of the year are, accordingly, being realized.

Rally in Foreign Exchange.

"The day's reaction to the important foreign developments of the week-end was confined almost entirely to the foreign exchange market. Sterling opened strong here at $4.22½, which is 2½ cents better than at the close on Saturday and is near the high price of the year. This strength was due to higher prices at London, where satisfaction existed over the Irish situation, the German reparations prospects and the meeting at Cannes. After our opening, however, local offerings of sterling were heavy and the price declined to $4.21¼. That the rally was due to the reparations situation and the hopes for a general improvement in the economic relationships of former belligerent countries is indicated by the behavior of the other European exchanges. French and Belgian francs and German marks advanced sharply while the currencies of the former neutrals were irregular. Thus French francs was as high as 8.8 cents even after reacting 5 points were still up 19 points on the day. German marks touched 0.60 of a cent and after falling back ⅜ of a point were still 4½ points better than on Saturday. The cables from abroad meanwhile suggest that wehn the reparation agreement is revised it will not only call for a smaller annual amount, but will allow a considerable part of the payment to be made in goods rather than cash.

Old Russian Issues Sought.

"Another interesting development which is related to developments at Cannes and the possible happenings at Genoa is a revival in the demand for certain of Russia's outstanding obligations. The demand became apparent on Saturday and was continued today. Romanoff 500 ruble notes advanced on this buying from 9 cents to 11 and the old internal and external bonds have almost doubled in price. Speculators obviously are hoping that soviet Russia will be brought into some kind of an arrangement which will include the honoring of the debts of the old regime.

"Little of interest occurred in the commodity markets. Cotton was firm at the start on a better Liverpool market, but did not receive enough support to maintain its gain. March was unchanged at a late price of 18.28 cents. Wheat was dull also, with prices fluctuating within narrow limits. May lost ⅝ of a cent at $1.12¼.

Wall Street News and Comment
—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Extremely heavy selling of the Erie stocks was the feature o nthe Stock Exchange. All three classes of Erie stocks were carried down to new low record figures. The railroad hasc $15,000,000 issue of three-year notes which mature the first of next April. These notes are backed up by securities having a par value of $32,589,000. These securities consist of Erie's own bonds, the general lien 4s, the 4 per cent series D convertible bonds and the refunding and improvement 6s, series B.

The easier rates for money continued today the important influence on the bond market. The effect of the 3½ per cent quotation for call money was readily apparent. Liberty 3½s made the greatest gain and reached a high price for the season. The other United States war loans also advanced.

WHEAT TRADE IS LIGHT ON THE CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Absence of any aggressive buying tended to weaken the wheat market today in the early trading. The fact that an election for officers of the board was in progress served to diminish active dealing. Besides, bulls were apparently inclined to go slow pending further developments in regard to milling demand and to reported crop damage Southwest. Opening quotations, which varied from unchanged figures to ⅜c lower, with May 1.12½ to $1.12⅝ and July 1.01¾, were followed by slight setbacks all around, and then by a rally, which, however, failed to last.

Lack of support became more pronounced near the end of the day, notwithstanding a liberal decrease of the visible supply total. The close was heavy, ⅜c to 1¼c net lower, with May $1.11⅝ to $1.11¾ and July $1.01 to $1.01⅛.

Corn and oats were easy with wheat. After opening unchanged to ⅛@¼c lower, May, 53½c to 53⅝c, underwent a further sag, but then recovered somewhat. Oats started unchanged to a shade higher, May 39c to 39@39⅛c, and later showed slight general losses.

Export demand helped later to sustain values. The close was steady at ⅛c to ⅛@⅜c net decline, with May 53⅜c to 53⅜@53½c.

Provisions were dull but firm.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 9.—Flour unchanged to 10c higher. Bran, $22.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The early raw sugar market was firmer and prices were 1-16c higher on the basis of 1 1-16c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 3.54c for centrifugal. There were sales of 5000 bags of Cubas to a local refiner for January and 22,000 bags to an operator for February. The strength in the spot market and Washington reports to the effect that the "invisible" supplies of sugar are small, led to increased buying in raw sugar futures and prices at midday were 5 to 9 points net higher. There were no changes in refined sugar with fine granulated listed at 4.80c to 4.90c. A much better inquiry was reported for both domestic and export account. Refined futures were without transactions.

Sugar futures closed steady; approximate sales, 10,100 tons. March, 2.22c; May, 2.39c; July, 2.57c; September, 2.67c.

COTTON FUTURES ARE STEADY IN TRADE AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The steadier tone which had developed in the cotton market toward the end of last week was in evidence again at the opening today. It was evidently encouraged by the relatively firm showing of Liverpool and favorable Manchester advices, while there was also bullish comment on the opening strength of foreign exchange and reports of a better tone in the goods market. The market opened at an advance of 5 to 12 points with active months selling 14 to 18 points net higher, after the call, or up to 18.40c for March and 18.00c for May.

There was some scattered realizing and the market also appeared to be meeting some selling for Southern account. This checked the advances and caused some irregularity. The failure of demand to broaden on the early advance seemed a disappointment and prices eased off later under scattered liquidation or realizing and a little further selling. March reacted to 18.24 and May to 17.82c, or a point or two below Saturday's closing. Trading became quiet at the decline and the market was steady around midday. Later reactions in Liverpool and setbacks in the stock market probably promoted the decline in cotton.

Spot cotton steady; middling, 18.55c.

Cotton futures closed steady. Jan. 18.__; March, 18.32c; May, 17.89c; July, 17.__; October, 16.58c.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off With Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a 'dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

Boston Buys Lightly.

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—There has been no marked inclination as yet on the part of retail merchants to abandon the hand-to-mouth buying policy which they have been following for months. This has created an unusual situation in the textile trades, which have been the backbone of New England's industrial activity throughout the last year. The demand for finished goods seems to have slowed up, yet at the same time there is an actual shortage of the raw staple. It is becoming increasingly difficult to secure either high-grade wool or high-grade cotton except at sharp advances in price and it seems inevitable that both woolen and cotton goods will sell materially higher before 1922 is far advanced. This is predicted regardless of any temporary disposition of consumers to follow advances in price.

The department store trade of the last month has left most of the big merchants in a strong financial position.

RAIN IN RANGE COUNTRY.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Jan. 9.—Rains throughout the Southwest in the last week have produced better conditions in the range country and have stopped the wild rush of cattle to market. Trading in livestock with Mexico has been resumed and a more optimistic feeling prevails among ranchmen. A conference between American and Mexican business men will be held at Laredo shortly and is expected to result in closer commercial relations.

The unemployment problem throughout the Southwest is solving itself chiefly through additional farming operations, oil prospecting work and road building. The improvement in the bond market has been followed in Texas by the sale of millions of dollars' worth of road bonds. This new work is absorbing thousands who were out of employment when harvesting ceased.

Farmers have been encouraged somewhat by recent freight rate adjustments. Business failures in Texas in 1921 were 778, againts 294 in 1920. Bank clearings showed a decided gain throughout this district in the last month and banks report an increase in deposit accounts.

FORT WORTH.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Jan. 9.—The first week of 1922 has been marked by many bank consolidations in the Southwest. This is especially noticable in the rural communities, where banking and credit conditions have been gloomy for six months. Many institutions which were forced to close their doors in 1921 are re-opening, or have been placed in such shape that depositors are beginning to realize on their assets.

SOUTH AMERICA.

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 9.—The situation of the farmer and stock grower in Argentina is growing more desperate and the Banco de la Nacion is considering the possibility of extending credit to the agriculturists, the loans to be for five years at 5 per cent and to be secured by the crops and herds of borrowers.

WHEAT.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 9.—The Michigan winter wheat crop is 17 per cent above the average condition of the crop for the whole country. Acerage in wheat is 5 per cent greater than last year, totalling 923,000 acres. The rye acerage is 653,000 and the condition is 94, two points above the 10-year average.

PAPER.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9. — Unskilled laborers employed by the largest independent paper companies outside the International Paper Company underwent a cut of 20 per cent in pay today as a result of a finding by a board of arbitration which fixed the basic hourly pay at 32 cents.

STEEL.

LIMA, O., Jan. 9.—The Ohio Steel Foundry will re-open January 15, giving employment to 500 men. The plant closed in November.

ALTOONA, Pa., Jan. 9.—After being idle throughout the greater part of 1921, the Altoona Iron Company's plant has resumed operations.

COAL.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 9.—The coal market continues quiet, with interest centering on coming wage conferences and the refusal of operators in large districts to meet with union leaders. In this immediate district bituminous production has been running about 25 per cent of capacity. Prices are soft.

LULL IN COAST TRADE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 9.—With the passing of the holiday rush and the termination of the white sales, there has come a lull in retail trade in this section. This, however, was foreseen and discounted, according to the credit representative of one of San Francisco's largest banks today. "We don't look for anything resembling a boom for some time," he said, "but on the whole conditions are satisfactory."

Realty sales for the year just closed set a new record for San Francisco. Business property was particularly active in the closing months of the year and prices have shown a steady advance. The crop outlook in California is excellent, although there is a somewhat reduced acreage under cultivation.

Building operations have been slowed down by continued rains, but the outlook for spring is most encouraging. There is some unemployment, but not more than is usual at this season of the year. Heavy snow in the mountains, followed by cold weather, has assured ample water supply for irrigation and power during the coming spring and summer.

MACHINERY.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 9.—The Wellman Seaver Morgan Company has been awarded a contract to build thirty-four cargo loading cranes for the City of New York. The Van Dorn Iron Company has orders for jail equipment which will keep its plants busy for several weeks.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—The new equipment of the Burlington road to be bought this year will consist in part of 500 stock cars, 1300 refrigerator cars, 2500 box cars, 3000 composite coal cars, 12 diners, five chair ars, 12 baggage ars, 22 mail cars and 22 combination cars.

AUTOMOBILES.

FLINT, Mich., Jan. 9.—The Buick Motor Co. resumed operations at its factories here today on a full-time production schedule. The Champion Ignition Co. is preparing to engage in speedometer production and is increasing its working forces.

LUMBER.

ESCANABA, Mich., Jan. 9.—Night shifts have been started by the I. Stephenson Lumber Co. in its camps here and the Northwestern Cooperage and Lumber Co. is advertising for men. These are two of the largest lumbering concerns in Northern Michigan and their action indicates improved conditions in lumber.

STOVES.

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 9.—The Atlanta Stove Works will resume operations on a 50 per cent capacity basis this week, having completed inventory-taking.

COTTONS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Prices for knitted underwear for the fall of 1922 have now been established by most manufacturers here. Cotton underwear shows advances of approximately 10 per cent. Part cotton and wool garments were advanced in lesser degree.

DRY GOODS.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 9.—The retail trade in Boston and vicinity has been most encouraging for the last month. Some of the department stores here did the largest month's business in their history in December.

RAISINS.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Jan. 9.—A considerable portion of the new crop of raisins has already been sold. Prices are steady and strong and demand has been good.

HOG RECEIPTS LIBERAL AND PRICES ARE DOWN SHARPLY

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., Jan. 9.—Today's estimated receipts: Cattle and calves, 5500; hogs, 24,500; sheep, 1500; horses and mules, 1200.

CATTLE—Receipts were moderate for Monday, with quality generally plain. A few sales of beef steers were steady; others showed a lower trend, several lots showing a 15c to 25c decline. The top was $7.50 per 100 lbs., paid for a weighty drove. Butcher heifers also sold at the price. Butcher stock in general was steady, with some of the more desirable kinds showing a higher trend. Stockers and feeders steady to a shade easier. Veal calves sold about in line with late last week, top making $9.50 and the bulk of the better kinds selling at $8.50 to $9. Quotations: Beef steers, high $9.50, low $4.75; bulk, $5.50 to $6.65. Butcher yearlings, high $10, low $3.50; bulk, $4 to $6.75. Butcher cows, range, $3.50 to $5.75; bulk, $4 to $5. Cutter cows, bulk $2.75 to $3.25. Canner cows, bulk, $2.25 to $2.50. Stocker and feeder steers, bulk, $4 to $5.50. Bologna bulls, bulk, $3.75 to $4.50.

HOGS—With a liberal run of 24,500, the hog market opened the week on a fairly active but sharply lower basis. General trade for the day was 40@75c lower, with the principal decline on lightweight hogs and pigs. The top on light hogs and pigs was $8.35, with bulk from $8@8.25. Lightweight butchers sold up to $8 and from $7.75@7.85, largely, with hogs weighing 200 to 230 pounds from $7.60@7.75, and stronger weights from $7.50@7.60. Rough hogs were nearly steady, with sows at $5.75@6 and stags $4.50@4.75.

SHEEP—Market ruled active and strong to 25c higher on a light Monday run of lambs and four loads of choice fed Westerns sold up to $12, which is the highest price recorded here since last June. A few good native lambs sold to city butchers at $12 and the balance of the day's offering at $11.50 and down, with culls from $8.50@9 mostly. Fat sheep remained unchanged in a spread of $5.50@6.

HORSES AND MULES—The new week brought forth another liberal run in this department, the estimate calling for 1200 head. Virtually all of this supply was on commission, and, as last week, the offering ran heavily to mules. About 200 horses were on sale at auction this morning, and 900 mules were available out of commission alleys. Auctions of mules will be conducted tomorrow.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

WM. S.—A quarter dated 1860 is worth from 25c to 30c.

E. F. C.—Either of the forms, "I have read" or "I read" (pronounced red) is correct.

TWO GIRLS.—We do not know the significance of the saying. It is probably only a superstition.

THANK YOU.—To find the names of persons or companies which compose music for song poems or buy the poems outright watch the advertisements. The magazines also publish such advertisements.

A. R. L.—Banting is the practice of bantingism which is a method of reducing corpulence, essentially by abstinence from fat-producing foods. It is known as the banting system or the banting cure and is named from William Banting, London. The system was made public in 1864.

J. M.—Directions for using glycerin to remove frost from windows are as follows: Dissolve 2 ounces of glycerin in 1 quart of 62 per cent alcohol containing, to improve the odor, some oil of amber. When the mixture clarifies it is rubbed over the inner surface of the glass. This, it is claimed, not only prevents the formation of frost, but also prevents sweating.

White window shades may be cleaned with wall paper cleaner. If a man was discharged on Monday, it would depend upon the agreement under which he began work whether he should be paid for the full week or not. We do not find a record of any President of the United States being tried for murder.

G.—(A) Good will, in accounting is treated as a fixed asset. (B) Reserve for depreciation, is a liability, but is carried in the balance sheet as a deduction from equipment, furniture, fixtures and machinery accounts. (C) Reserve is a surplus appropriated for a specific purpose. It is often desirable to "ear mark" a certain portion of the surplus in order that it may appear available for dividends. Such reserves are usually "set up" to care for contingencies, such as possible losses for bad debts of accidents, such as floods, fires, etc. A great deal of confusion has been found to exist regarding sinking funds for the redemption of debt. When bonds are issued, it is often customary to provide in the trust deed that a sinking fund must be provided for the redemption of bonds at their maturity. A certain amount is "set up" yearly to take care of the bonds when they mature.

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(Prepared by a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

P. D.—We believe you are entitled to the Missouri bonus, but your case is a very close one.

HOPEFUL.—We do not give information regarding the states in which first cousins can marry.

J. J.—If you do not stop at Palm Beach for any length of time your home license will be sufficient.

ED.—You cannot do what you propose in regard to the safety box if you are merely trying to evade the law.

J. S.—In the State of Missouri under the new law passed March 25, 1921, the girl will be of age when she is 21 years old.

LUCKEY JOHN.—You can sue the company for the promised bonus, if they gave you no information beforehand that it would not be paid.

THANKS.—You can lawfully make and sell phonographs under your name at your home, if you do not infringe patents, but you will require a license.

NEW YEAR.—The boy's marriage under the name of "B" was perfectly legal, he is entitled to use that name if he wishes, and you do not object to his doing so.

WORRIED.—You do not state how long you have been paying interest at this rate, or what total you have paid, but your statement of payments sounds to us to be excessive.

C. F. H.—Five days must elapse between the application for a marriage license and the time when it is granted, in Massachusetts, but so far as we know there is no requirement of publication.

J. McL.—The owner will have to give you at least one month's notice to vacate. You should insist on an agreement in writing permitting you to stay 3 or 4 months, also upon receiving written receipts.

NURSE.—We think the law is constitutional. It requires only evidence of qualifications and a $10 fee for licensed attendants and is more strict for nurses. The charges and uniforms of licensed attendants are not regulated.

R. M. C.—In 1919 the Legislature passed a State prohibition law, which was ratified by a referendum vote on Nov. 2, 1920. This would have to be repealed or amended as well as the Voistead act, for the sale of beer and wine to be legal in Missouri.

JACK.—(1) The girl cannot compel the man to marry but she can sue him for breach of promise. (2) Common-law marriages are no longer valid in Missouri, but such marriages contracted prior to March 31, 1921, are legal.

J. A. L.—The woman is not legally married to the second man, but has committed bigamy, the penalty for which is imprisonment for not more than 5 years, or a fine or both. She will have to remarry her present husband after securing a divorce.

DAILY READER.—Marriage licenses from nearby places are usually published in the St. Louis papers.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

(Answers prepared by a physician of authority. Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given. Questions that cannot be publicly discussed, if showing evidences of sincerity, will be answered when accompanied by stamped envelope.)

I. O. S.—(1) The man after having been successfully operated upon for varicocele would be perfectly normal. (2) These are not considered veneral diseases. (3) You have no cause for worry whatever.

A READER.—Fistula has been cured by injections of irritant fluids along the tract, but the method is uncertain and not to be advised. Surgical operation is the most dependable method in these cases.

MRS. B.—If unable to pay you may enter the city hospital or be treated at the free clinics. The receiving room of the city hospital is at 1601 South Fourteenth street. If seeking a clinic apply at Grand and Caroline or Scott and Euclid.

E. R.—We are assuming the trouble to be sciatica, although other conditions enter into such apparent cases, such as morbid growth along the nerve trunk, etc. It is not a condition for self-treatment, a competent physician should be in charge. In neuralgic or inflammatory conditions along the nerve the essential thing is rest. If the leg is in a splint it can better be accomplished. Cold applications relieve the pain for a time, but the relief is not as a rule permanent. Local causes should be sought as well as constitutional causes. The treatment is so purely professional it is difficult to suggest lay treatment. If you wish suggestions as to competent physicians enclose stamped addressed envelope making such request.

BUREAU NOT TO ANSWER ABSTRACT TAX QUERIES

Internal Revenue Commissioner Says Resources of Office Are Inadequate to Task.

Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair has sent to Collector of Internal Revenue Moore a communication in which he says it will be the policy of the Internal Revenue Department in future not to answer abstract or hypothetical questions as to income tax or profits tax liability. The communication is as follows:

"Requests are being received daily for rulings and advice upon abstract cases or prospective transactions involving questions of income tax and profits liability. These requests are so numerous and the insistence on prompt action so great that it seems advisable at this time definitely to outline the bureau's policy which will govern the consideration of these requests.

"The revenue acts of 1918 and 1921 depart widely at many points from prior law or practice, and have given rise to new questions of such importance, complexity and number that the resources of the bureau are no more than adequate to advise taxpayers promptly of their present liabilities arising out of past transactions. It is impossible to answer every question which the invention or ingenuity of the inquirer may devise without neglecting the fundamental duty of determining tax liability upon the basis of actual happenings. Under these circumstances the administrative necessity is obvious of giving precedence over abstract or prospective cases to actual cases in which the taxpayer desires to know what are his immediate liabilities under the law.

"It will be the policy of the bureau not to answer any inquiry except under the following circumstances:

"The transaction must be completed and not merely proposed or planned.

"The complete facts relating to the transaction, together with abstracts from contracts, or other documents, necessary to present the complete facts, must be given.

"The names of all the real parties interested (not 'dummies' used in the transaction) must be stated regardless of who presents the question, whether attorney, accountant tax service or other representative."

Interesting features of the splendid entertainment provided for the Prince of Wales, during tour of India, by the famous and fabulously wealthy Gaekwar of Baroda, loyal native Prince. At left, scene from the parade of the Gaekwar's forces, showing silver cannon, trimmed with gold and drawn by snow-white bullocks whose trappings were heavy with jewels and gold. At right, the Prince of Wales listens to the efforts of a native orchestra. Note the odd little smile on his face, as he stands in foreground with folded arms.

The Magic Spell of a Woman Spy

The Trial, Sentence and Execution of

MATA-HARI THE DANCER

High Officials Testified They Had Fallen Under the Spell of the Dancer While France's Fate Was in the Balance.

By FERDINAND TUOHY,
(Late British Intelligence Corps.)

THIRD INSTALLMENT.

In previous installments Maj. Massard has told how the French Intelligence Bureau had accepted the services of Mata-Hari, offered when she thought herself discovered, and how she trapped herself on receiving a remittance from the German chief of spies. "Only my lover's offering," she parried.

AS the hearing of the witnesses for the defense began Mata-Hari seemed more composed. She pencilled her lips with rouge, and smiled at the Court. Her counsel gave her a bunch of flowers, and she munched chocolates while stealing glances at the officers.

"Call Monsieur X,"' ordered the President.

An extremely distinguished looking gentleman, obviously feeling very much abashed, approached the witness box.

Mata-Hari stood up, but avoided looking at the witness, in order evidently not to add to his embarrassment.

"Kindly state your name and profession," requested the Colonel.

The witness obeyed. It must be sufficient here to say that he occupied a very high position—almost the highest—at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

"Why have you called the witness?" asked the President of Mata-Hari.

In a low, smooth voice Mata-Hari replied:

"Monsieur occupies one of the highest positions in France. He is acquainted with all the Government's intentions and military projects. I met him on my return from Madrid. He was my first friend after my divorce, and it was quite natural that I should be glad to see him again. We spent three evenings together. I now put the following question to him: 'Did I, at any moment, ask him for any information? Did I ever take advantage of our intimacy to extract a secret from him?'"

"Madame never asked me any questions," replied the witness.

"You see, it is quite clear that she is not a spy," interjected Mata's counsel. "If she had wanted to gather valuable information she had only to extend her hand."

"Then what did you talk about during those three evenings?" questioned the Colonel. "In the middle of a war, you did not discuss what was worrying us all—the war?"

"We discussed Indian art," explained the witness.

"We will admit that," said the President. "But you must confess that the fact of being able to count among her friends a person so highly placed as yourself gave the defendant unusual prestige in the eyes of the Germans. No doubt that explains the supplementary remittances which she received on various occasions through the legation of ——."

The witness retired with a sigh of relief. The Court had not been too inquisitive.

The question arose as to whether Mata-Hari had made use of the official letter paper of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs for her correspondence with the Chief of the Espionage Service. There was no proof that she did, although fragments of paper found at her home permit the hypothesis.

Many letters from officers, aviators and Parisian notabilities were found in Mata's rooms. One was from a Minister of War. The latter referred to events of the day and also to subjects of a more intimate character.

The President was beginning to read the missive when Mata-Hari rose to her feet and cried: "Do not read that letter, Colonel."

"I am obliged to do so," was the reply.

"Then keep the signature secret," begged Mata.

"Why?"

"Because the writer is married, and I do not want to be the cause of a tragedy in a good family. I beg of you, do not read the name."

The Colonel hesitated.

Then another officer got up and insisted that the whole letter with the signature be read.

This was done, and the court learned the name of the Minister. The revelation stupefied every one. At the same time it provoked some smiles.

"You are not discreet," observed Mata-Hari, with a pout.

"Of course you never discussed politics or war with the Minister?" asked the President.

"Never," replied Mata-Hari. And she sat down with the air of a vain woman, satisfied with the effect she had produced by the disclosures of her relations with a Minister.

Major Massard believes that Mata-Hari's relations with French dignitaries were merely used to enhance her importance in the eyes of the Germans, who must have considered that a woman in a position to walk in and out of the office of a Minister of War at will would be invaluable.

The narrator declares that Mata-Hari was in need of money, although the total amount which she is supposed to have received from the Chief of the German Intelligence is only 60,000 marks, or $15,000. He explains that this was a lot for the Germans, who were by no means generous with their spies, and rarely gave them more than about $200.

It was never revealed in course of the trial, which took place strictly in camera:

How the secret of Mata-Hari's relations and of her correspondence with Amsterdam was discovered.

How the spy-name was discovered, or the cipher by which she could be recognized by the German agents.

How her wireless and other telegrams received and transmitted through a certain legation were deciphered.

What first caused her to be watched, and which legation transmitted her mail.

All that belongs to the mysteries of counter-espionage.

The important fact is, according to Maj. Massard, that the military-judicial authorities discovered precise acts which the accused woman did not deny, but merely tried to explain. Her letters to Germans—love letters; money received from official spies—presents from her lovers. With such a system of defense it was impossible to find her lying or contradicting herself. She admitted everything, but explained everything. To persist in that line of defense extreme audacity and superior intelligence are indispensable. Mata-Hari had both, and that is why she was the most dangerous of spies.

The pleading of the accused's lawyer was moving without being convincing.

Still, Mata was confident; she did not think she would be condemned. At the close of the proceedings she composed her features, as in the theater, and struck an attitude. She employed all the coquetry of which she was capable in the final act. She ceased to be an accused person disputing and seeking to save her head. She was once again the woman and artist smiling at her judges as an audience. For little, she would have disrobed and offered them a sample of her talents. She had succeeded with big people; why should she fail with small?

"Have you anything to add in your defense?" asked the President of the court.

"Nothing. My lawyer told the truth. I am not a Frenchwoman. I had the right to have friends in other countries, even in countries at war with France. I remained a neutral. I count on the good hearts of French officers."

Her counsel took her hands with fervor—all was over.

When, 10 minutes later, the judges emerged from the deliberations, I heard Maj. C—— say: "It is terrible to send such a seductive and intelligent creature to her death. But she has caused such disasters that I would have sentenced her 10 times over had I been able!"

Mata arrived for sentence, holding herself erect, but pale. Her counsel, in tears, had advised her of the news.

"Judgment, in the name of the French people," pronounced the clerk of the court.

"Present arms!" came the command from an officer.

Mata pouted, slightly shrugged her shoulders and smiled. She seemed only to be a little annoyed that she could not go out a free woman and proceed with her amours. If in that moment she seemed to be confident, it was that she possessed powerful protectors not only in France but in foreign countries, especially in Holland. Gen. Boucabeille, former military attache at The Hague, had assembled various documents referring to the dancer. Mata before becoming the mistress of a French Minister of War had had the German Crown Prince as lover. He once took her to the manoeuvres in Silesia. In passing through Holland she had likewise selected the Dutch Prime Minister Van der Linden as a protector. The latter tried hard to bring pressure to bear upon the French Government with a view to procuring Mata-Hari's release. It should be stated that Queen Wilhelmina, despite the insistence of the Prince Consort, declined to associate herself with this effort. The Prime Minister, after the condemnation, called the French "savages" and "barbarians." His Government had allowed a vast system of espionage to flourish openly in Holland. The German Consul was at the head of this service.

One Letter From a Minister of War, Found in Her Room, Was Read to the Court Against Her Protest.

(Tomorrow's installment covers the story of Mata-Hari's life at St. Lazare, the French prison. Her conduct as a condemned spy was as notably different as was her behavior before the court that condemned her.)

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE.

IT is necessary for some people to judge others. These people are placed on the bench and in jury boxes. They are paid to discharge the duty of judgment, and discharge it they do, though the task is often disagreeable.

The rest of us make judgments because it is the habit of everyone to make judgments. We like or we do not like people sometimes because of their personalities, often because of their exactions.

We are very ready to condemn them if they do not obey the code that we have adopted as our own rule of conduct.

Sometimes we condemn them because we do not like the shape of their noses or the color of their hair, or the way they eat their meals.

Make judgments we must—but we can suspend sentence if we like, and we shall be much happier, and get along with our friends and neighbors if we do.

The man on the bench before he makes his judgments, the jury in the box before it brings in a verdict, have all possible evidence at hand. The whole machinery of the state is available to secure this evidence.

We make our individual judgments with very little evidence—usually with the evidence against the person whom we judge—seldom taking the trouble to look over the evidence in his favor.

This being the case we can very well afford to hold our verdict, or our sentence, in reservation.

What we think of a man may not alter his whole life; but, if our opinion is adverse, it certainly will do him no good. It will be practically impossible to keep from communicating it to others, and this character is undermined and careers brought to ruin.

Suspended sentence merely gives those whom we do not approve a chance to show that we have wrongly estimated them. This most of them will do in the long run.

Of course, if a man is a proved thief or scoundrel, it is well enough to let him alone. But it is far better to hold our opinion and our behavior toward him in reserve until we can get all the facts in his case—for and against.

The Fortune Hunter

(An Absorbing Love Story.)

By RUBY AYERS

EIGHTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

The Fortune Hunter turned very white. He had come to London with the belief that he would do anything in the world demanded of him, if only he could keep Anne's love and belief, and already at the first suggestion he felt himself shrinking from it in horror.

He shook his head mutely. Irene watched him with that cold mixture of amusement and compassion still in her dark eyes. "I can't make you out," she said at last. "Haven't you got the pluck, or what is it?"

"I don't know * * * I can't explain. * * * Oh, I wish to God I'd never come back to the cursed country," he broke out.

She waited.

The Fortune Hunter looked up. His face was set with ugly lines and he ignored her offered hand.

"Very well—I agree," he said, hoarsely. "Five thousand in a week's time and 5000 the day I * * * I * * * " He could not go on.

She laughed at his distress.

"You're an odd mixture," she said coolly. "Neither knight or knave, but a little of both. Very well—then that's a bargain, and now what do you want to know about John Smith?"

"Anything—everything there is to know."

"That's a tall order, but I'll do my best. * * * You know he did seven years before he went abroad."

"Yes—but I don't know what it was for."

"Embezzlement and forgery. He was always crooked, even when he had plenty of money, and he was well off when he was a young man. He ruined his father with his extravagance—he used to boast about it to me. Then he got into a gambling, rotten set and took money that didn't belong to him. He might have wriggled out of that, only he went a step further and altered a figure on a check. You don't want to hear the details—they're not very likely to crop up again. He did seven years, and then Anne Harding's uncle gave him a sum of money to get clear of the country."

The Fortune Hunter made a stifled exclamation.

"Mr. Harding!"

"Yes. She doesn't know, or at least she didn't at the time. She was only a schoolgirl when John met her, and he was her first love, I suppose." Her lip curled a little in contempt. "Anyway, she stuck to him all along, and wouldn't believe he was guilty—"

The Fortune Hunter leaned forward eagerly.

"And—was he?" he asked with an effort.

Her dark eyes met his scornfully.

"Was he? Of course he was, 20 times over."

"And Mr. Harding paid him to get out of the country?"

"Yes; he hoped she would forget him, I suppose, but apparently it made her think of him all the more. She thought it was an honorable act on his part to go away and give her a chance to change her mind. * * * The times I've heard John laugh at her innocence."

The Fortune Hunter looked away, his teeth hard set.

"The man was a worse rotter than I am," he said savagely.

She nodded. "Yes, I think he was. He was born crooked, and if he'd lived he never would have gone straight, even with nearly a quarter of a million to spend—" she paused. "Well, is that all you want to know?"

"There are lots of small things * * *. I can't remember * * *" he answered confusedly.

Irene nodded. "I'll give you my address—you can write. I think I'll stay on here for a bit now things are settled." She looked round at the crowded room. "I rather like the Savoy," she added coolly.

The Fortune Hunter was hardly listening, his mind was in torment.

Could he trust her? He knew that he was staking a great risk, and yet what else was there for him to do?

"I know what you're thinking," she said suddenly. "You're wondering if I'm going to be a drag on you for the rest of your life—always turning up and blackmailing you * * * well—no, I'm not that sort! I don't pretend to be any better than I am, but I'm straight in my own way, and as I said before, I rather like you. You * * * you remind me a little of—of the man I * * * told you about. He chucked me because he said I wasn't straight. * * * No, don't say anything, but I give you my word—for what it's worth—that if I get my ten thousand you shan't ever be bothered with me again." For the second time she held out her hand. "I'd like you to believe me," she said with unexpected earnestness.

They looked at one another for a moment silently, then the Fortune Hunter took her hand in his. "I wish you the best of luck," she said.

He laughed mirthlessly.

"That's kind—though unlikely," he answered. "Then you'll give me —how long—for the first payment?"

"One week. I'd give you longer, but I'm hard up! You'll know where to find me. I shall sit tight here and wait for you to come along."

"I dare say I shall write—I may not be able to come again."

"Just as you like." She was quite unconcerned. "The money's the chief thing, after all." He looked at her with a baffled expression in his handsome eyes.

"You know, you're a queer mixture, too," he said suddenly. She flushed and sighed. "Am I? That's because I'm always trying to kill the woman I was meant to be, and I can never quite succeed. I wasn't intended for a wrong 'un, like some of us are." Her eyes dwelt on him for a moment. "I don't think you were, either," she said confidentially. "Where did you come from—I mean, where were you born?" He laughed.

"In England, I believe, but I'm not sure. I don't remember my father, my earliest recollections are of Australia. I lived there till I was 16—with my mother; then she died, and I turned vagabond."

"You were fond of your mother! There was something in your voice when you spoke her name"——

"Yes—yes, I was."

They were both silent for a moment, then Irenie Claver held out her hand again.

"You know somehow I think things will come out all right for you," she said; then she laughed. "That sounds humbug, doesn't it, when I've just dunned you for £10,000?"

She did not wait for a reply, but rose to her feet, drawing her wrap around her shoulders.

"I'm going down west. Can I drive you anywhere?"

"I'll go straight back to Somerton."

The Fortune Hunter followed her out of the room and into the lounge again.

He was conscious of an enormous sense of relief that the interview was over, and yet he had never felt so unhappy or so full of misgivings.

Anne trusted him, and with every moment of every day he was adding to the mountain of lies and deceit which were his only return for her faithful love.

He tried to shake the thought aside and be thankful that the great danger that had threatened him that morning had been overcome, but somehow the shadows by far outweighed that one ray of sunshine.

There was a taxicab in the courtyard outside, and he handed Irenie into it. "You won't let me drive you anywhere?" she asked again.

"Thank you—no." He stood at the open door, looking at her rather wistfully.

"And if there is anything else you want to know," she said cheerily, "don't mind asking. Thieves ought to hang together."

A man turned out of the Savoy Theater entrance at that moment and strolled leisurely along the path toward them.

He glanced casually at Irenie Claver and then quickly at her companion, and his blase face changed into a look of swift recognition as he half stopped, then went on again slowly as the Fortune Hunter turned and their eyes met.

The man was Geoffry Foster.

After the first shock of surprise, the Fortune Hunter quickly recovered himself; he nodded casually to Geoffry Foster and turned again to Irenie Claver.

She was watching him with a touch of anxiety.

"Was that someone you know?" she asked.

"Yes — only an acquaintance, though."

Irenie looked after Foster's immaculate figure, and there was a frown between her darkened brows.

"I thought somehow I had seen him before; what is his name?"

"Foster—Geoffry Foster."

She echoed the name thoughtfully, then shrugged her shoulders.

"I was mistaken, I suppose. Well, good-by—and good luck."

She got into the cab, and the Fortune Hunter shut the door.

"I shall hear from you in a week's time then?" were her last words.

The Fortune Hunter nodded. "Yes."

He raised his hat and turned moodily away.

How to Remove Stains

By Emilie Hoffmann

HOW often we hear of garments ruined by the improper treatment of stains. The first essential of success is that the stain be treated promptly. A stain is much easier to remove while fresh than after it is old. If a stain has dried or the article has been washed and ironed, the probabilities are the stain is fixed and will be difficult to remove.

It is quite necessary to know the nature of the stain, since this determines the treatment required. Some stains are set by the treatment that would remove others.

The fabric should be considered too, because the treatment depends upon the color, weave, nature and weight of the material. For instance, strong acids should not be used on cotton. Never use hot water on silk or wool, neither should strong alkalis be used on these fabrics. A bleaching agent, such as javelle water, oxalic acid, potassium permanganate or hydrogen peroxide, will work well on white goods, but may destroy the color of colored fabrics and so on.

It is advisable to use simple methods first and of these water is the safest agent. It will often accomplish the work if used while the stain is fresh. If chemicals are used it is best to experiment on a sample. A chemical that will remove a stain will usually weaken the fabric, therefore they should be used with care.

As soon as a chemical has taken out the stain it should be removed by thoroughly rinsing the material in cold water and applying a neutralizing agent and after that rinse again in cold water. Acids, such as salts of lemon, muriatic acid, etc., can be neutralized by using ammonia, baking soda or borax, about one-fourth teaspoonful to a cup of water. Stretch fabric over a bowl of water and apply the solution, a drop at a time. Rinsing with clear water is important. An alkali, such as ammonia, potash, caustic soda or strong soap, should be treated with lemon juice, vinegar, weak oxalic or hydrochloric acid. Latter should never be used on silk.

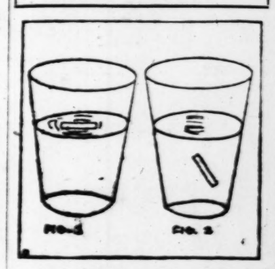

Take your time in removing stains. "Haste makes waste" in this work. And be careful to rub very gently.

The absorbents are the simplest stain removers and are efficacious in grease stains, blood and ink spots and freshly spilled liquids. The common absorbents are blotting paper, unglazed paper, French chalk, talcum, starch, corn meal and fuller's earth. When using solvents, such as gasoline, alcohol, chloroform, turpentine, etc., place the stained fabric over a pad of cloth or paper and apply the solvent with a stick rounded at the end. Work from edge of stain toward the center. Spread powder around the edge of the stain to keep the liquid from spreading and prevent the formation of a ring. Change the pad when soiled.

Stain removers should be carefully labeled and kept together in a laundry closet.

No. 5—Metal Floats on Water.

A METAL disc that floats when carefully placed in a glass of water is quite a curiosity, but when the same disc sinks when placed in the glass by some one other than the performer, the experiment becomes a mystery as well.

But in reality it is not the same disc. Two are used, one made of aluminum, the other of tin or steel, cut from sheets of metal. The steel disc is concealed in the folds of a handkerchief. After the aluminum disc has floated and someone wishes to try the experiment, the performer obligingly wipes off the disc for him and during that action retains the aluminum and pushes forward the steel. The exchange is repeated whenever necessary.

"While freedom of choice in a husband is gaining ground, marriage among women is almost universal. Divorces are still rare. If divorced, a teacher loses her rank. THIS is a plain dish, suitable for serving with roast meat. Wash and soak the beans, put them on in cold water, add a lump of dripping the size of an egg to the pound, and when they begin to soften, a little salt and a few peppercorns; soak until done, then add more seasoning to taste, and either put the beans in a hot vegetable dish, shaking them up with a little butter, or put them on a dish with the joint and some of the gravy. This is excellent with roast mutton.

Another way: Stir an ounce of butter and some chopped parsley, with seasoning to taste, into the beans, and shake the pan over the fire for a few minutes; add a squeeze of lemon juice and serve in a dish.

Pensioning of Dogs Teaches a Lesson

Sophie Irene Loeb Finds Place Where Dumb Animals Get Better Treatment in Old Age Than Many Faithful Men and Women.

By SOPHIE IRENE LOEB.

IN the village of Elmford, on the Finley Sheppard estate, there is a dog kennel. I had occasion to go there because I was taking my dog, Jack, there for his winter quarters.

He was up in the country with me during the summer. I hated to part with the faithful little animal—my little watchdog in the woods—but a New York apartment is no place for a real live dog, and there was only one thing to do—to board him there for the winter.

When Jack was in his stall I was tempted to take him back again. He looked at me with a world of woe in his eyes as much as to say:

"You are the woman who is against institutions for children; who wants every little child to have a home and loving care as against orphan asylums, and now look what you have done. You have put me in an institution with many, many other dogs, and what kind of a dog's life I am going to lead I don't know."

And I hesitated—yes,, I did—because he seemed to say just that to me. So I made up my mind to stay around a while and see the other dogs and how they were cared for and all the rest before I would leave Jack in that little stall. And I learned a whole lot—much that gave me food for reflection.

I went into the house of the keeper, the man who takes care of the dogs—Mr. Foster. There I found more dogs, but these were a part of the household. They had the best of everything in the way of quarters, of course.

I asked why these dogs were in the house and I was told they were pensioned dogs, and then I learned what a pensioned dog was.

, The pensioned dog is one who has grown old and given faithful service in a family, and that family has been loth to put him to death or to throw him out in his old age, so they send him to Mr. Foster. They pay so much a month for his keep, and there he lives happily ever after until death claims him.

And that is why the old dogs get even more attention than the other members. In the first place, it is to the advantage of the keeper to keep the dog alive as long as possible, because his pay for the dog ends with the death of the dog.

Secondly, because it is usually a delightful dog which has been beloved in the home of some family, and what a comfort that family must feel to know that the dumb animal which has been so useful for so many years is not the object of charity or permitted to suffer because of its old age.

What a lesson to hundreds of men and women when you think of the old fathers and mothers who are left to suffer and even die by neglectful children—parents who have sacrificed and skimped and saved to give all to those children through many years! It makes you feel very kindly disposed indeed to the people who insist on even pensioning their dog when it grows old.

There is the faithful servant who has for years given the best of his life to a family, and when he gets too old he is permitted to go and shift for himself and be blown by the winds of chance.

There is the old employe in a great business who has grown up with it and grown old in it, and he is let go because of his gray hairs.

Somehow or other, I cannot help wishing that all such people could have been with me that day when I went over to see the pensioned dogs. Each one had peculiarities of disposition that were known to the keepers. Each one had some delightful attribute that even old age could not kill. Some of them were nearly human, so long had they served the human. And to think that these dogs were comfortably cared for and the balance of their lives secure!

If only such people could have seen them and heard the stories I heard about them I am confident they would have searched deep in their hearts and found that somewhere along the line they had failed to pension somebody to whom a pension was due.

Nobody wants to be pensioned merely because of age. Nobody wants to be pensioned only as an object of charity. But there are those who give such priceless service that even money could not buy that this small aid in their declining years is certainly a thing worth considering.

It is the highest kind of charity, because it truly begins at home.

Many a person writes out a check to charity and thinks he is doing his part, when perhaps he has let a mother or father or employe or servitor suffer because of old age.

The pensioned dog serves a good lesson indeed in the human hive. Ask Mr. Foster.

Raisin Pudding Quickly Made.

BUTTER a basin, line it with bread and butter ¼ inch thick, without crust; put in a layer of the stewed raisins and bread and butter alternately, pouring the juice in last of all, just sufficient to soak through the bread; press down tight with a plate. When cold turn out and serve with a custard sauce or whipped cream. Try it. Children will like it.

The Mystery of the Basket.

LONG ago Old Man Coyote learned the truth of this. At the same time he learned that while he who ventures nothing gains nothing, he loses nothing; but he who is overbold may lose everything. So, though Old Man Coyote is very bold at times, he is never reckless; he makes sure that he hasn't overlooked anything. At least, he tries to make sure of this so that the chances may be in his favor and not against him.

It was a bold thing for him to burrow under that stack of straw in Farmer Brown's barnyard and plan to stay there. Yes, sir, that was a bold thing to do. But he knew that no one would ever think to look for him there, for no one would ever guess that he would even think of hiding so near. Now, as he lay there peeping out, he was tempted to do another bold thing. Just a little way from him was a basket. Farmer Brown's Boy had taken it from a sleigh and set it down there while he and Farmer Brown unhitched the horse and put him in the barn. Both were inside the barn now. Old Man Coyote was tempted to find out what was in that basket.

He looked over to the house. No one was to be seen there. Bowser the Hound was not about. It would take less than a minute to slip over to that basket, find out what was in it and slip back under that stack of straw. Old Man Coyote hesitated only long enough for one more look about to make sure that there was no one to see him. Then he crept out and swiftly stole over to that basket. A moment later he was back under that stack of straw.

Hardly was he out of sight when Farmer Brown's Boy and Farmer Brown came out of the barn. Farmer Brown's Boy picked up the basket and they went over to the house. When the door was opened Bowser the Hound met them with wagging tail.

"Here are the groceries and things you wanted from the store," said Farmer Brown's Boy as he put the basket on the table.

Mrs. Brown at once began to unpack it. "Where is the meat for dinner?" she asked as she took out the last package.

"Why, it is there, for I put it in there myself," said Farmer Brown, looking very much surprised at the question.

Mrs. Brown shook her head. "It isn't here," said she, once more going over the packages.

Farmer Brown came over and went over everything himself, and such a funny, puzzled look as there was on his face when he couldn't find that meat! "I know I put it in that basket. It was the very last thing, and I put it right on top," said he. "It must have jounced off on the way home and we didn't notice it. Son, run out to the sleigh; I guess you will find it there."

Farmer Brown's Boy ran out to the sleigh and looked and looked. He shook out the robes. There was no sign of that package of meat. He even went into the barn and looked there, thinking his father might have taken it in there and forgotten about it.

When he returned to the house and reported that that meat wasn't to be found, Farmer Brown went to the telephone and called up the market where he had bought that meat to see if, after all, he had left it there. When he hung up he looked more puzzled than ever. "The market man says it isn't there," said he. "He says he saw me put it in the basket, just as I told you I did. Where was Bowser while we were unharnessing?" he demanded with sudden suspicion.

"Right here in the house all the time," replied Mrs. Brown promptly. "He met you at the door when you came in. You can't blame Bowser for that lost meat."

Farmer Brown shook his head. "Then it is a mystery to me what has become of it," said he. "I don't see how it could possibly have fallen out of the sleigh. Yes, sir, it is a mystery."

The Heart of a Girl

A Story of Romance and a Business Career in St. Louis

By Caroline Crawford

CHAPTER XXXI.

Cyril Budd Proves a Persistent Admirer.

PEGGY was surprised when she emerged from her apartment the next morning on her way to business to see the tall, gaunt figure of Cyril Budd. He was sitting on the stone ledge in front of the apartment calmly reading a book.

"Oh, I knew you'd be along at about this time, Peggy Dayton," said Budd, closing his book and jumping to his feet. He wore a light-colored overcoat and tan spats. A little felt hat at least two sizes too small for him gave a liberal view of his black curly locks which Peggy so despised.

Despite Peggy's cool greeting, he caught hold of her arm and, quickly getting into step with her, marched off toward the car line.

"How do you think I spent the night after I brought you home from the dance?" he asked. "I'll give you three guesses."

"I haven't the slightest idea," replied Peggy in a weak little voice, which really meant "I don't care a cookie."

"Well, I composed a new piece of music," announced Budd, "and I'm going to take it down to some musical people I know right now. But I wanted you to have a look at it first. Then you ought to see the lyric I wrote about you which is to go with it."

Peggy was rather enthusiastic for just a second. How thrilling it was to have inspired a young man to compose a song and write a lyric!

"Just listen to this," demanded Budd as he rattled off a string of sentimental words, which did not always rhyme, about a girl with brown bobbed hair and sky-blue eyes.

"It's great, isn't it?" he asked, without waiting for Peggy's opinion. "If I can get this over with the publishers it'll make my fortune. And you will have been the one who inspired me to write it.

"I can't tell you how I admired you just the moment I saw you at Marion's last night," he continued. "I haven't thought of a thing but you since I set eyes upon you. I simply had to write a song about you."

"Haven't you ever written a song before?" asked Peggy, rather more from curiosity than because she felt flattered.

Budd gave her a quick glance as the color mounted to his ears. "We-ll, yes, of course I've tried, but I never had anything accepted," he replied.

"I suppose you always compose a song whenever you meet a new girl," laughed Peggy.

"Now, Peggy Dayton, you don't appreciate what I have been saying to you about inspiration."

"Please call me Miss Dayton," corrected Peggy.

"What, after I have written a whole song about you, can't I even combine your name? You will notice I didn't quite dare call you Peggy."

"When your song is published it will be time enough for that," laughed Peggy.

"Really, you don't take me seriously."

"It's more important that the publishers should take you that way."

Then as they reached the subway station Peggy made up her mind that she would not ride down with this creature who wrote lyrics, had curly hair and wore spats. What right had a man she had met at Marion Minton's dance to wait for her on her doorstep the next morning? He could compose all the music he chose and write numerous lyrics about her, but he could not ride down to business with her.

"I have to phone," announced Peggy as they passed a drug store.

"I'll wait," responded Budd.

"But it's going to be a very long call."

"Time is nothing in my young life," grinned Budd.

"Mr. Budd, I prefer to have you run along to the publishers," said Peggy quite forcefully.

A dark shadow passed over Budd's face, but he said, "Oh, very well, but you'll see me again. Faint heart never won fair lady, Miss Dayton."

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

(One of a series of short funny stories by the celebrated American humorist which appear daily in the Post-Dispatch on this page.)

A VULGARIAN UNMASKED.

IN New York is a certain pool and billiard hall much frequented by writers, baseball players and actors. Also, it is a favorite loafing place for a number of more or less interesting characters. Among the regular habitues is an elderly gentleman known as "the Major," whose conversational specialty is to claim a close personal acquaintance with the people, habits, customs, languages and peculiarities of practically all the out-of-the-way places of the earth. It has been estimated that if the Major had visited all the far countries he says he has visited, and had spent as much time in each of them as he says he has spent there, he would now be considerably over 300 years old.

Not long ago someone in his presence mentioned Zululand. That was a sufficient cue for the Major. For 20 minutes he edified the audience with an account of an expedition led by him into the uttermost wilds of Zululand, where, according to his statement, he was entertained for many months by a chief from whom the Major professed to have acquired a fluent knowledge of the native tongues and dialects.

The next day a newspaper artist, who was born in Spain and who has a complexion almost as dark as a Moor's, dropped in. Seeing him, the proprietor had an inspiration. He told his plan to the artist and to half a dozen others; and then, followed by the rest, he led the illustrator to where the Major sat and introduced the pair to each other, giving the swarthy stranger an unpronounceable name.

"Major," added the proprietor, "this gentleman is a Zulu who has been in America many years. He is homesick for the sound of his own language again. That's why I have brought him to you. He wants to talk to you."

This was the signal for the dark conspirator. Clinging fast to the Major's hand, he poured out a stream of mingled Spanish and Portuguese, with clucks, grunts and gurgles interpolated.

The Major listened intently until the other paused for breath. Then, with a mighty snort of disdain, he wrested himself free; and as he broke through the circle and stalked out he called back over his shoulder to the plotters:

"Never allow that person to come near me again. Why, the vulgarian doesn't speak anything but Low Zuluese!"

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

By James J. Montague.

NOW AND THEN.

You doubtless remember the tale
Of the night, which, though wintry and wild,
Yet was pierced by the heart-rending wail
Of the helpless saloon keeper's child.
She sat in her lowly, thatched cot,
On a cheap little, mean little street;
Distressing indeed was her lot,
For she had but a dry crust to eat.
The brewery'd foreclosed on her thriftless old dad
And the crust—a quite small one—was all that she had.

She knew if for aid she applied
What the pitiless neighbors would say,
And so she just sat there and cried,
Which cheered her a bit—in a way.
For be it from her to beg bread,
Or to crave, say a pie, as a boon,
And to hear it remorselessly said,
"Your father—he keeps a saloon!"
So she ate up her crust, in a single brief bite,
And vainly sought sleep for the rest of the night.

How altered conditions today,
When saloon keepers flourish no more,
And the bootlegger drops in to say
That he's got a nice case of "pre-war!"
"Two hundred a case for five-star,"
He snarls in a hard, rasping voice;
"I've promised my daughter a car
And I think she prefers a Rolls-Royce."
You pay it perhaps—and buy six quarts of water,
But you never will weep for the bootlegger's daughter!

Enrico Caruso once said at a dinner in New York:

"In my youth in Naples I once took part in some amateur theatricals at the Bertolini Palace Hotel—in the fine, large hotel salon, you know, with its outlook over the bay and Inlands.

"The hotel orchestra, a very good one, had a great deal to do in our drama. At one point it had to play a very lovely selection, in the midst of which I was to rush in, hold up my hand and say in a shocked, heart-broken tone:

"'Stop the music! The Queen is dead.'

"Well, the evening of our performance the orchestra outdid itself. I never heard it play more passionately, more beautifully. But, as for me, I was very nervous, and when I rushed in and held up my hand the words I shouted in my confusion were:

"'Stop the music; it has killed the Queen!'"—Detroit Free Press.
